Action on Key and Dobbs Holds Council Spotlight

MOVE FOR OUSTER IN GRADY TANGLE APPEARS CERTAIN

Provisional Mayor Pro Tem. Announces Support of Action But Declines To Reveal Who Will Be Author of Resolution.

STORMY SESSION SEEN BY LEADER

Demand of White for Apology By Key for Wet Utterances in France Shares Spotlight.

Action on a resolution calling for the removal of Samuel C. Dobbs as chairman of the board of trustees of Grady hospital shares the spotlight at borough council this afternoon with a demand for an apology from Mayor James L. Key for his utterances in France concerning prohibition. The meeting is expected to be one of the stormiest sessions in years.

Considerable comment was heard Sunday among council members on the John A. White resolution censuring Mayor Key for his alleged wet statement in Paris where he is among the American mayors attending the French exhibit of its colonial possessions.

Just what action will be taken by council on the resolution could not be learned. It was revealed that though Mr. White has obtained a number of supporters for his censure move, a majority are not in favor of taking any action until Mayor Key returns to Atlanta.

Demand for Dobbs' resignation will be made at the session. Provisional Mayor Pro Tem. J. Charlie Murphy, who wrote the letter requesting Dobbs to quit, stated Sunday, and Murphy will support it. Author of the paper was not announced.

A battle is anticipated on the Dobbs ouster, however, as Millican and others will champion the hospital head, with Murphy, Councilman George B. Lyle and others leading the attack.

Although C. E. Kauffman, borough bridge engineer, worked hard last week in an effort to complete plans for reconstruction of the Broad street viaduct, there are several other details which can not be finished by the council session this afternoon.

Clarke Donaldson, chief of construction, predicted Sunday that the work will proceed without a hitch as soon as they are ready. Plans are to rebuild the bridge before fall.

Among other major matters slated for councilmanic consideration this afternoon are the following:

1. Two measures seeking authority of the Georgia assembly to establish

Horton Delays Action On Caldwell Custody

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 31.—(AP)—A decision as to whether he will honor a requisition of Governor Flem D. Sampson, of Kentucky, for the extradition of Rogers Caldwell from Nashville to Louisville, where is under state indictment, will be made by Governor Henry H. Horton Saturday, he announced today.

Caldwell, presiden of the defunct investment banking house bearing his name, was indicted at Louisville several weeks ago on a charge of obtaining credit by making a false statement in writing in connection with the Bankokentucky-Caldwell and Company merger.

Governor Horton said he had advised both sides to submit briefs in the case and that he would study them and render his decision Saturday.

Under the Tennessee statute, Governor Horton does not necessarily have to honor this requisition, since Caldwell also is under indictment in this state.

Franklin Takes Grady Post; To Give Public 'Square Deal'

With his aim as "efficiency" and an announced policy of utter frankness with the public at all times in all matters pertaining to the hospital, J. B. Franklin, formerly of Georgia Baptist hospital, will assume office today as superintendent of Grady hospital.

Steve Johnston, retiring superintendent, whose resignation becomes effective July 1, will take a month's vacation which has been due him for some time, it was said Sunday. However, according to Mr. Franklin, Mr. Johnston will be in the city and "subject to call" at all times if his services are needed in helping the new superintendent in taking over control.

Mr. Franklin moved into his new residence, atop the nurses' home of Grady hospital, Saturday. Sunday he stated that he will begin his duties as superintendent at 8:30 o'clock this morning. He added that he would not divulge at present all of the aims and policies he intends to pursue, but that these will be announced in full at a meeting of all employes of the hospital to be held in the assembly room of the institution at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

He did state, however, that the hospital will be operated on a frank and open basis in so far as the public and the press are concerned.

"I intend to follow an 'open-door' policy," he said, "and we will not try at any time to conceal any facts from the public. People can have what information they want. It is through this means that I hope to build up a public psychology that will cause the indigent poor to have no hesitancy or fear in coming to Grady hospital for treatment."

"There is nothing basically wrong with Grady," he continued, "but public confidence must be built up. I am going to give Grady the best that I have, and I want it to be a municipal institution the equal of any in the country. I want Atlanta to be proud of Grady.

"We do not intend to operate Grady on an extravagant basis, but economically. However, economy will not interfere with efficiency. Grady is going to be efficient in all lines, medical, nursing, emergency, and all others."

When asked if he had any personal changes in mind he stated, "This position came to me unsought and I have no friends to reward. I am entering office without any entanglements, without any condemnations, and without any awards to make. Whoever is efficient and is loyal to Grady and has its best interests at heart—they will stay. Those who have not these qualifications will, of course, go. Efficiency must come first."

He added that he will bring about co-ordination, saying that all units must work for the best interests of the other units and that in such a manner a more efficient Grady will be established. "It is for the poor of the city who need medical attention, and they must have the best," he asserted.

He lauded the work of the retiring superintendent. "Mr. Johnston has done excellent work," he declared, "and has operated the hospital in the best way possible. His advice and experience with the work will be a valuable asset to anyone following him in office."

BUSINESS GAINS NOTED IN APRIL

Commerce Department Reports Show Much Improvement for Month.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(AP)—The commerce department reported today that business conditions generally showed continued and, in some instances, marked improvement during April.

Greater than seasonal improvement was shown by manufacturers of food products, automobiles, leather and shoe products, cement and tobacco, but iron and steel and non-ferrous metal products manufactures were smaller than in March.

"April was the third consecutive month," the department said, "in which the volume of business in the United States, after allowing for normal seasonal trends, showed further slight expansion from the low levels established in January, while the seasonal decline occurring in early May has been slightly larger than usual.

"Industrial production as measured by the federal reserve board's seasonally adjusted index, registered another increase in April, and in that month was 9 per cent above the December level. Output of manufacturers was larger than in March, owing chiefly to greater than seasonal improvement in the food products, automobile, leather, shoe, cement and tobacco industries, while iron and steel and non-ferrous metal production was smaller than in the preceding month. The textile industries maintained recent gains at March levels with the cotton industry especially active.

"The index of mineral output, adjusted for seasonal changes, increased nearly 5 per cent from the low level of the depression established in March.

"Building construction in April as measured by contracts awarded decreased 9 per cent from the preceding month instead of continuing the seasonal increase, usual at this period, which was manifest in February and March. A further decline of seasonal proportions occurred in the first half of May. In general, residential building has been holding up better than commercial and industrial types.

"Expansion in manufacturing and mining industries and the seasonal resumption of outdoor work in agriculture and building has brought further improvement in the employment situation with reduction of part-time

1 KILLED, 4 SHOT BY BRONX THUGS

Veritable Massacre In Poolroom Is Averted by Poor Marksmanship.

NEW YORK, May 31.—(AP)—One man was killed and four wounded, two critically, in a shooting affray in a Bronx pool room early today. It was the third shooting in the Bronx in three days.

Only poor marksmanship, police said, averted a massacre as three gunmen entered the 149th street place at 2:30 a. m. and blazed away at a group of 12 men.

Police said the shooting was the result of a flare-up over small gambling rackets. The dead man, identified as Genaro Ataroli, 20, was the chief object of the attack because of a dice game he conducted in a candy store until recently. Police said they found dice, but no money in Ataroli's pockets.

Those wounded were Michael Del Guidice, 23; Louis Stalder, 23; Michael Kohutencz, 19; Joseph Mella, 36, all of the Bronx. Del Guidice and Kohutencz were sent to a hospital.

Man Kills Children, Stabs Wife to Death

PORTLAND, Ore., May 31.—(AP)—Declared by police to have asphyxiated his two children, and to have stabbed his wife to death with a bayonet, Iba H. Ormond, 38, was held tonight in jail.

Neighbors reported they were awakened by screams early this morning and saw Ormond, armed with the bayonet, chase his wife from the house and stab her fatally.

Then, they said, the husband declared "This is the hour of reckoning. I did this for what she did on the 28th."

Hawks in Copenhagen On 'Cannon-Ball' Tour

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 31.—(AP)—Captain Frank Hawks, American aviator, who left Le Bourget field at 11:52 a. m. today on a "cannon-ball flight" from Paris to Copenhagen, Amsterdam, Basel, Rome and back to Paris, arrived here at 6:12 p. m.

Mayors Hear Dijon Wine Praised As Key Rejoins Itinerant Party

DIJON, France, May 31.—(AP)—The touring American mayors were given a hearty welcome by a crowd of 12,000 persons when they arrived in this ancient capital of Burgundy this afternoon. Later they heard an oration in praise of the famous wines of the region.

The visiting executives and their wives were cheered in a spontaneous demonstration of the holiday throng. Mayor James L. Key, of Atlanta, who was forced to take a rest by doctor's orders, rejoined his colleagues today. He received a warm welcome.

In the stately old city hall, which once was the palace of the dukes of Burgundy, Mayor Gaston Gerard and other municipal officials welcomed the Americans.

M. Gerard, who also is undersecretary of state for public works and tourism, boasted of the wine grapes of his section which are used in making Burgundy wines.

Pointing to the wine goblets on the refreshment table, he said:

"There are other things to drink on this table but I hope they will not be used."

Mayor John C. Porter, of Los Angeles, was the only executive who was deaf to this plea, declining the offered beverage and contenting himself with a glass of ice water, which had been provided for him. Mrs. Porter emptied her golden goblet, but it contained nothing but orangeade.

"On that table there are a lot of good wines, which we hope soon to be able to sell to you as in the old days," Mayor Gerard had said in his speech of welcome.

"Remember that we are in a wine-growing country whose fermented products are the least harmful in the world for the human system.

"As you go around here just look at our Burgundy peasants, who have drunk wine all their lives, and see how healthy, hearty and long-lived they are."

Mayor George L. Baker, of Portland, Ore., who served as official

Having arrived in Atlanta Sunday from every point of the compass, the newspaper editors of the nation this morning will register for the forty-sixth annual convention of the National Editorial Association, which will convene promptly at 9:30 o'clock in the Georgian room of the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

All delegates will have registered by the hour of the initial session, which will begin with community singing, in charge of the musical department of the Atlanta public schools, following which Dr. W. W. Memminger, rector of All Saints' Protestant Episcopal church, will deliver the invocation.

The visiting editors will be welcomed to Georgia and Atlanta by Secretary of State George H. Carswell, representing Governor Hardman, on behalf of the state, and by Luke Arnold, executive secretary to Mayor James L. Key, for the city of Atlanta. Louie L. Morris, president of the Georgia Press Association, will greet the newspapermen as the representative of editors of this state.

Today's meeting will be divided into two sessions—forenoon and afternoon. The convention will continue through Thursday. On Friday morning the visiting editors and their Georgia colleagues will leave on an eight-day tour of Georgia, covering virtually the entire state, and being the guests of towns and cities all along the route.

Problems confronting journalism, both from the editorial and business office standpoint are to be discussed daily during the convention. Many of the country's outstanding editors are on the program to deliver addresses relating to the profession, and in addition, matters pertaining to circulation, advertising and general ethics will come up for discussion.

An elaborate entertainment program has been prepared, in addition to the Georgia tour. At 7:30 o'clock this evening there will be a brilliant reception in the Georgian ball room of the Biltmore, followed by a theater party at the Fox theater. On Tuesday afternoon, from 4 to 6, a lawn party will be tendered the editors at the Brookhaven Country Club. This will be preceded by a drive through the most charming section of Atlanta's residential area. The lawn party will enable those who desire to do so to begin their 1931 swimming season, arrangements having been made, it was said, to open the fine pool at the country club to the editors.

On Wednesday a luncheon at the Biltmore will be followed by a trip to the Tate Mountain Estates, at Tate, Ga., where the newspapermen will be guests of the Georgia Marble Company. They will be shown through

Four Badly Injured In Motor Car Crash

One person was critically injured and three less seriously hurt ina head-on collision between two automobiles Sunday night at Sylvan road and Lakewood avenue.

An automobile driven by Willie Clark, 20, of 486 Calhoun street, S. W., carrying Miss Dora Stone, of Fort McPherson, 1159 Apartment C., and a machine driven by Ross Roberts, of 110 Taylor avenue, East Point, containing J. F. Sykes, of West Washington street, East Point, crashed at about 8:30 o'clock. Clark suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries, and Miss Stone was injured internally. Both are at Grady hospital. Roberts and Sykes were less seriously injured, sustaining lacerations and abrasions, and after treatment were allowed to go home. The cars were badly damaged. A. C. Hemperley's ambulance took the victims to Grady.

Immediate Reapportionment Is Urged by Senator George

United States Senator Walter F. George in a statement to The Constitution warmly commends a recent editorial in which the general assembly at its approaching session was urged to take action at the summer session on congressional reapportionment of the state rather than to delay the redistricting of the state for two years.

Under the new congressional reapportionment Georgia loses two members of congress. In the congressional election in November of next year 10 congressmen are to be elected in the place of the 12 now serving.

Unless the general assembly redistricts the state at the summer session the 10 new congressmen will have to be chosen at a general election by statewide vote, a condition which Senator George believes to be "unthinkable."

In discussing the matter Senator George said: "I cannot conceive that the general assembly will do the state the injustice that would be involved in denying each district the right to name its own congressman.

"The suggestion has been made that the summer session may have so many other things requiring its attention that it will delay for two years the

19 DEATHS PROBED IN POISON CASE

Exhumations May Result in Additional Murder Charges Against Widow.

CHICAGO, May 31.—(AP)—A total of 19 deaths are now being investigated in connection with the poison murder charges against Mrs. Margaret Summers, rooming house proprietor, Coroner Herman Bundesen said today.

The deaths were those of lodgers and relatives of the woman, who is already accused of four poison slayings.

The additional names were obtained in a canvass today of five homes in which Mrs. Summers has lived since she came to Chicago from Effingham, Ill. Each death, officials said, was entered in the woman's family Bible which was confiscated.

Further exhumations, the coroner said, may establish whether the deaths of these other persons were accomplished by poison inasmuch as the fatal potion found in the bodies of the men Mrs. Summers is accused of killing was of a variety which remains after disintegration.

Deaths of two more of Mrs. Summers' husbands, bringing the total of her fatal marriages to five, have been disclosed, the coroner said, and as a result the inquiry has been carried back to a period of 25 years ago. They were Stanley Jones and James Lynch.

Investigators are seeking to learn if Mrs. Summers insured these men as she had the others.

The three other husbands whose deaths had been established previously were James Fairfax, Stanley Korzen and Thomas Summers.

Mrs. Summers is formally charged with murder in connection with the deaths of Summers, Thomas Meyers, 17, a nephew; Thomas Lanagan, 46, a roomer, and William Reenan, 72, a roomer. She held insurance policies in excess of $6,500 on the four.

Baby Girl Is Killed In Georgia Accident

SOPERTON, Ga., May 31.—(AP)—Martha Louise Gillis, three-year-old daughter of former State Senator and Mrs. Jim Gillis, of Soperton, was killed in an automobile crash this afternoon between Pavo and Hollis in Thomas county, according to word received here tonight. Mrs. Gillis was slightly injured, it was learned, but was not taken to a hospital.

The Gillises, who were en route to Tallahassee for the commencement exercises of the Florida State Woman's College, will return to Soperton late tonight with the body of the child. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Martha Louise is survived by her parents, two brothers, J. L. Gillis Jr., and Hugh Gillis; grandfather, M. L. Gillis Sr., and several uncles and aunts.

AIRPORT OPENED AT BIRMINGHAM

Crowd of 75,000 Views Dedication of Magic City Plane Terminal.

BY GENE HINTON,
Constitution Aviation Editor.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 31.—Atlanta and Birmingham, long rivals in civic progress, were linked more closely here this afternoon with the dedication of an airport which is second to none in the south. A crowd estimated at 75,000 witnessed the ceremonies.

Opening of this city's magnificent new port, which is eligible for the highest rating of the department of commerce, was given official recognition Saturday with the inauguration of air passenger-mail service by American Airways, Inc., the company's big planes Saturday had settled down to the routine of landing at the new Birmingham port and both arrivals, from Atlanta and from Dallas, were on time, in spite of weather conditions which threatened for a time to put a stop to the air meet activities.

Frederic G. Coburn, president of American Airways, Inc., delivered the principal address at the dedication ceremonies Sunday afternoon, expressing American Airways' pleasure at coming into Birmingham and heaped high praise upon the city officials who were responsible for the construction of the city's new port and the civic groups which had co-operated in the project.

"I wish all other southern cities would take such a progressive step," Mr. Coburn said. "We all want airmail and air passenger service, yet only a few of us apparently are willing to provide those facilities which are vitally essential for their operation. The new Birmingham port is one of the finest in the country; it is certainly unsurpassed in the southern states."

Other speakers at the dedication ceremony, which was the feature of Sunday afternoon's program, were George J. Fertig, president of the Birmingham Junior Chamber of Commerce; General John C. Persons, of Tuscaloosa; Congressman W. B. Oliver, Senator Hugo L. Black, Congressman George Huddleston, Second Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover, D. A. Thomas, president Birmingham Chamber of Commerce; J. M. Jones Jr., president of the Birmingham city commission; Asa Rountree Jr., general chairman for the dedication, who formally re-

LOYAL SUBJECTS TO RETURN COTTON TO THRONE TODAY

Week Is Set Aside To Boost South's Leading Industry; Stores To Lead Observance.

Directly as the result of efforts of a Georgian, the nation this week will officially extend recognition to cotton as an essential of life. This is National Cotton Week.

There have been "weeks" of many kinds set aside by the government, but the first six days of June constitute the only official period of its kind in which the case in behalf of the south's principal product has been presented to the public by Uncle Sam.

The present movement is not a "buy-a-bale" campaign such as the south experienced during the early days of the European war, but it is a serious effort on the part of the government and cotton industrialists to stimulate interest in the staple that serves man in so many ways.

See General Benefits.

During the week it is the purpose of the government and those supporting the movement to so interest the public in cotton and cotton goods and by-products that it will become "cotton-minded" to the extent that stocks will enjoy a substantial turnover. In this matter it is believed that business generally will be benefited and that, with seasonal trade at its height, some impetus will be given the wholesale and retail trade in all lines.

Atlanta department stores during the week will feature cotton goods in general, and will decorate their display windows with the most attractive fabrics and garments woven of the south's main product. Near Five Points, on Peachtree street, a huge cotton banner will be strung across the street proclaiming the city's part in the observance. Acting Mayor G. Everett Millican has issued a proclamation calling for city-wide observance of the occasion, and the borough will join the rest of the nation in honoring the occasion.

About five years ago Senator William J. Harris launched a movement that resulted in National Cotton Week. When the house appropriation bill came over to the senate, Senator Harris waged a vigorous floor fight to have incorporated into the supply measure a provision for cotton. The senior Georgia senator succeeded in getting an annual appropriation of approximately $70,000 which was to be used by the departments of commerce and agriculture to study various uses for cotton. Under the enthusiastic activity of the then Secretary of Commerce Hoover, scores of new uses were discovered for the staple, and each year the appropriation bill has contained a clause caring for the cotton studies.

Callaway Leads Movement.

Had it not been for the fact that the Harris cotton amendment had passed, there would have been no funds for observing a National Cotton Week. This is evident from the fact that the wool growers of the nation, recently hearing that the government intended to sponsor a cotton week, demanded equal recognition.

Ash's Pacific Flight Again Is Postponed

SAMUSHIRO BEACH, Japan, June 1.—(Monday)— (AP) —Fog at daybreak prevented the take-off of Thomas Ash Jr., American aviator, on his projected 4,400-mile flight across the north Pacific.

At 7:45 a. m. (5:45 p. m., Sunday, E. S. T.) the beach was still shrouded and a take-off today was doubtful.

Ash reduced his gasoline supply by an additional 35 gallons today. This, with the 20 gallons removed from the monoplane "Pacific" yesterday, leaves him 965 gallons and lightened the plane by several hundred pounds.

'Tex' Guinan and Her 'Little Girls' Virtual Prisoners in French Port

HAVRE, France, May 31.—(AP)—Far from the bright lights of Broadway, "Texas" Guinan, traveling night-club hostess, tonight was reported near collapse from the strain resulting from detention in the hotel Transatlantique here which is being patrolled by French police and detectives.

The entertainer remained behind closed doors in her little room with three narrow beds and barred windows, and refused to see visitors.

"She is all worn out with strain and has a splitting headache," said "Bunny" Weldon, director of the Guinan chorus and the party's spokesman. "She can't see anybody."

Meanwhile, Director Mourier of the generale surete police at the ministry of the interior in Paris, announced Miss Guinan and her troupe of 30 girls must leave France without putting on their performance in Paris. He added that pleas of Miss Guinan's friends had failed to alter the government's decision that they should not remain in France.

Rigid restrictions now have been placed on the movements of the party, which hitherto had been allowed comparative freedom.

Detectives at the hotel doors today refused to allow the girls to leave the building, which is maintained as a lodging place for deportees and emigrants. A trip to church, originally scheduled as today's only outing, was cancelled.

With the last hope fading that permission will be given to enter Paris, members of the troupe were becoming irritated with their routine life behind the barred windows and their breakfast at 8 a. m., to which they are summoned by a gong.

"I could stand it if those bells were not forever clanging," one of the girls wailed, expressing the general sentiment of the party, which huddled in fur coats as a protection against the cold, rainy weather.

"I don't care where we go so long as we go some place," another dancer moaned.

CARDINALS CALLED TO DISCUSS CRISIS

VATICAN CITY, May 31.—(UP)—Pope Pius XI tonight summoned members of the College of Cardinals in Rome to an extraordinary session on Monday in connection with the holy see's ineffectual protests against the fascist attitude toward Catholic organizations.

The meeting, which was called shortly after the pope in a birthday address had virtually accused the Italian government of bad faith, will be in the consistorial hall where approximately 22 cardinals will assemble to hear the pontiff outline the present situation and decide on future action.

BOLOGNA, Italy, May 31.—(AP)—Four bombs were exploded here during the night in the vicinity of Catholic institutions, killing one person and injuring two. Thirty arrests were made.

The explosions caused little property damage.

Three of the bombs exploded at irregular intervals when no one was nearby in the streets.

A brigadier of a carabinier patrol picked up the fourth one and it went off in his hand, killing him instantly. A nearby militiaman and a passing civilian were injured.

The fact that the bombs were placed near Catholic quarters caused police to believe they were put there as a threat against Catholics in connection with the present Catholic Action agitation.

Nothing was published here about the explosions and the police refused to make known the identity of those arrested. However, it is believed the suspects are fascist youths who have been active in recent anti-church demonstrations.

BREACH BETWEEN ITALY AND VATICAN WIDENS

ROME, May 31.—(AP)—The breach between the Italian government and the Vatican widened tonight with the receipt of information that four bombs were exploded near Catholic property at Bologna, with Premier Mussolini continuing to close Catholic Action clubs throughout Italy and with Pope Pius XI denouncing fascist education as "given to hate, irreverence and to violence."

In an address before a group of ecclesiastics at the Vatican, the Pope

ture will commit such a blunder. It is unthinkable.

"In the first place, if the legislature does not reapportion the state this summer the next congressional delegation will have to be elected by statewide vote, the 10 candidates receiving the highest vote of the state composing the delegation to represent the state in congress for the next two years.

"This would deprive the districts of the right to choose their own congressmen, and it is possible that by such method every one of the 10 men elected could come from one district. While this is not probable, it is practically certain that in a statewide choice many, if not most, of the districts would be deprived of representation. This too, is unthinkable.

"In the next place, one of the serious results of legislative inaction this summer on this question would be to deprive our minority membership of the prestige it now holds in the matter of important committee up to committee chairmanships.

"It is practically certain that the congress to be elected in 1932 will be democratic. Most of the members of the Georgia delegation now hold ranking positions as members of the minority. In the event the democrats carry the next house the ranking minority members are certain to move up to committee chairmanships.

"This advantageous position would be lost if we chose our delegation by a statewide vote.

"If the election should be held on a statewide basis there would probably be 25 or 30 candidates, all forced to make a general campaign throughout the state and at a very burdensome expense.

"All this can be obviated by legislative reapportionment this summer and there is nothing before the general assembly of more importance than this.

"Just as soon as the general assembly meets this matter should be referred to a competent committee which should make careful study of the question, day and night, and make report as early as practicable during the session.

"Meanwhile the legislature can go right ahead with its other important work.

"I cannot conceive that any representative Georgian in the next general assembly would stand in the way of the action on this all-important question this summer and I am sure that even those who have suggested it will, upon reflection, and after a knowledge of what delay would mean, conclude that it is to the best interest of the state to have the legislature buckle down to this subject as soon as it meets and to reapportion the state this summer, thus giving every district the right to choose its own congressman as it has done from time immemorial."

CATHOLIC BUILDING TARGET FOR BOMBS

announced that he would appeal to the Vatican treaty and the concordat as a basis for a solution of the difficulties. He said that the Catholic Action Society "had been and is most precious" to him.

A brigadier of the carabinieri patrol was killed by the bomb at Bologna and another soldier and a civilian were injured.

Premier Mussolini continued to carry out his order closing the Catholic Action clubs throughout Italy and it was estimated that by tomorrow night 15,000 of the clubs would have been closed by the police, affecting 500,000 members of the organization.

The papal newspaper organ, Osservatore Romano, today published a list, two and one-half columns long, of alleged anti-clerical incidents. The list included the invasion of monasteries, slapping of priests, an attempt to burn the bishop's palace at Verona, the trampling of the pope's portrait and the sacking of Catholic clubs.

Bishop's Palace Set Afire.

The bishop's palace at Verona was set afire, the paper said, by a group of men who drove up in an automobile, sprinkled gasoline on the great doors, and set fire to them.

It also charged that two monasteries were invaded at Civita Vecchia Thursday and that the door of the Episcopal palace there was forced open by men who slapped the face of the vicar general, one Ignor Compagnucci. At Cisalgo, it said, a parish priest's face was slapped and it charged that fascists entered three Catholic clubs at Venice, trampled the portraits of the pope and King Victor Emmanuel, leaving Mussolini's untouched.

Tables, chairs and paintings were tossed out of the windows into the canals, it was charged, and at the Tarcisio Club it was alleged that 100 fascists operated under the eyes of the militia who made no move to restrain them.

The paper said that posters were put up in Rome reading: "Death to the pope, to the priests and to the Catholic Action!"

Close as a complete rupture between the government and the Vatican seemed, however, it was believed that the situation was still not without some hope of settlement.

The government's reluctance to announce definitely what it intends to do with the Catholic clubs was interpreted by the Vatican as an effort to play "a waiting game."

Government officials intimated that the closing order would be temporary and that one club had been told that it is free to reopen. The clubs which the fascists believe free from politics, it was indicated, or which give assurances of being so, may be authorized to resume activities within the strict limits covered by the concordat.

Whether the church would accept such a solution could not be learned.

Order Carried Out.

Although it was learned on good authority the Vatican had been notified that Premier Mussolini had decided definitely to dissolve the Catholic Action Society throughout Italy government officials declared the dissolution can still be avoided.

The premier's order was being carried out in the meantime, however, and it was estimated that by tomorrow night 15,000 of the Catholic Action clubs would have been closed by the police, affecting 500,000 members of the organization.

There was also a promise tonight that the American ambassador, John W. Garrett, would be drawn into the affair.

Papal Count Edward Hearn, head of the Knights of Columbus, announced today he will ask Ambassador Garrett tomorrow to file a protest with Foreign Minister Dino Grandi against the closing of playgrounds and clubhouses of the Knights of Columbus.

Mr. Hearn was said to be indignant when the San Lorenzo playground was closed yesterday, and he ordered the remaining centers to be immediately locked up. He said he would tell Ambassador Garrett the Knights of Columbus feel that the playgrounds are property managed by their organization for Roman children, regardless of creed, at a cost of $75,000 a year, that the playgrounds have no connection with the church, and that the Italian government has no right to close them.

Today was the 74th birthday of Pope Pius XI, and he described it as "one of my saddest days."

Addressing a group of ecclesiastics, he made a reference to fascist education "as one of hate, irreverence and violence." Repeating his statement of last night, he said:

"One may ask our life, but not our silence."

He said it was his right and duty to have recourse to the Laterun treaty and the concordat in the present situation and to make representations, which he said was being done.

His reference to violence was emphasized by reports which came to the Vatican today of invasion of monasteries, slapping of priests, sacking of clubs, the attempted burning of the bishop's palace at Verona and the news of four bomb explosions near Catholic institutions at Bologna last night. The bombs caused no property damage, but resulted in the death of one soldier and the wounding of a soldier and a civilian.

Many incidents of a minor nature were reported from the closing of thousands of Catholic clubs throughout the country.

Confusion over the exact nature of Mussolini's plan was greater today than yesterday.

It was strongly denied by church officials that the pope, by putting bishops in charge of the branches of the Catholic Action Society, was attempting to throw the protecting cloak of the church about them.

Following this move, however, it was said, the issue is drawn now between the fascist government and the church and the pope himself, while previously there were intermediaries in the persons of the officials of the various clubs and organizations.

EDUCATION ANTITHESIS OF CHURCH, SAYS POPE

VATICAN CITY, May 31.—(AP)—Proclaiming his reliance on the Vatican treaty and the concordat for a solution of the present difficulties between the Vatican and the Italian government, Pope Pius XI today described the events of the last two or three days as "the first manifestation of proof of an education that is the antithesis of Christian and civil education and entirely given to hate and irreverance."

The pope's statement was made in an address to the ecclesiastics at a commemoration ceremony at the Vatican.

"We have not lost one day," he said, "in appreciating the inestimable benefits of the establishment of religious instruction in schools—an education that should also be educational.

"But there has begun too soon the destruction with the left hand of that which the right hand had built and which, it was said, it was desired to build. It is the saddest spectacle to which Rome and Italy have been treated and it has revealed already how far advanced is the work of destruction of all good education."

The pope spoke of today, his 74th birthday, as "sad and unhappy" because of "grave griefs that greeted me yesterday in that which has been and is most precious to us—the Catholic Action Society, and particularly the juvenile and universities groups."

2. A resolution to increase the municipal utilities ownership committee from five to seven members.

3. Establishment of a sewer district, including about 275 square miles of territory, to relieve present sewer conditions in and around Atlanta.

4. Presentation by the finance committee of the June finance sheet, balanced by over-anticipation amounting to approximately $490,000, with borough schools another $1,176,000 short for the year, making a total deficit of $1,666,000 if all departments are to be continued for the entire year.

5. Adverse report of the ordinance committee of council on a proposal by Councilman John A. White and Grant park, which houses the vast painting depicting the Battle of Atlanta; the Federal penitentiary, Stone mountain and the Henry W. Grady monument. At the downtown monument President George B. Dolliver, of Battle Creek, Mich., will place a wreath at the base, as a tribute of the profession to the great southern editor.

A banquet Thursday night will be given the editors on the terrace of the Biltmore, with cabaret entertainment.

The Georgia Press Association and The Editor's Forum, of which Hal M. Alderman Farris Mitchell to establish daylight saving time for Atlanta.

6. An offer for $250 monthly rental for the old city hall site at Forsyth and Marietta streets for an unnamed client of Ward Wight & Co.

Acting Mayor G. Everett Millican Saturday declined to accept Dobbs' resignation, filed with the borough on Murphy's demand because "Dobbs says he doesn't live in Atlanta or Fulton county."

Dobbs' Plans Not Known.

Millican returned to Dobbs the resignation with a request that he continue to serve, but the Grady hospital board head has not yet made known his intentions as to whether he will comply with the Millican request or whether he will insist that the resignation be accepted. He has indicated, however, that he will serve unless he is the target of a council barrage this afternoon.

Murphy will explain why he asked the resignation and is expected to renew that demand on the floor of council this afternoon. If he does, he will have the backing of a group of council members who insist that members of all executive boards and officials should be residents of Atlanta.

Millican's action in rejecting the resignation precludes any council action on the resignation, but the effort probably will be directed toward a change in the law or a clarification which would exclude Dobbs or any other administrators who live outside Atlanta.

The papers seeking authority to establish municipal electrical plants ask a charter amendment empowering Atlanta to take whatever steps are necessary to acquire a borough-owned and operated plant, while a second paper gives any city in the entire state the same authority.

Sewer committee members will urge the adoption of the sewer district paper and will seek to have the Georgia assembly at the coming session to authorize such a district.

AIRPORT OPENED AT BIRMINGHAM

Lowering clouds and a drizzling rain which arrived during the afternoon, dampened the enthusiasm of most of the spectators, but failed to prevent the running of the free-for-all race, the feature event on the three-day program.

Doc Dice, of New Orleans, flying a Wasp-powered Laird speedster, speeded around the 15-mile course at an estimated speed of nearly 200 miles an hour to win the event easily. He was followed by Art Davis, nationally-known airman, in a Wright-powered Waco taper wing, while John Livingston, in a Monocoupe, finished in third place. The event was run under lowering clouds and in a driving rain, which drove most of the huge crowd of spectators to cover. Asa G. Candler's Lockheed Vega, which was slated to be one of the strongest contestants, was withdrawn at the last minute. Beeler Blevins deciding that the visibility was too poor for racing a cabin place.

Blevins left for Atlanta, with Mr. and Mrs. Candler, Jimmy Scales and J. S. Byrd as passengers, soon after the race got under way.

In the 170-horsepower race, first event on Sunday's program, John Livingston, of Aurora, Ill., brought his Monocoupe into first place, easily outstripping a big field. Vernon Omlie, of Memphis, flying another Monocoupe, landed in second place, and L. E. Shealy, of Charlotte, N. C., at the controls of a General Aristocrat, finished third.

James T Williams Jr., of Atlanta, young transport pilot, won second place in the dead-stick contest, which drew more entries than any other event on the program.

Young Williams, flying his own Waco "F," brought his plane to a standstill only 19 feet from the mark. Everett Fisher, of St. Petersburg, Fla., flying an Eromarine Klemm, won the contest, bringing his ship to rest 7 feet 8 inches from the circle. John Livingston took third place and L. G. Mason, of Montgomery, in a Wright-powered Ryan, fourth.

A tremendous crowd viewed the Sunday events and heard the dedication ceremonies and was rewarded by seeing not only a fine series of events, but a great airport, of which Birmingham, as well as the entire south, might well be proud.

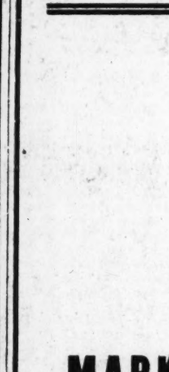

The program for Monday, which has been designated as Army-National Guard Day, will be devoted to a formation flying contest between air corps units which are on hand for the meet and a series of maneuvers by army and navy planes. Service planes were prevented from competing in any events on the first two days of the meet because of government regulations.

See for yourself just how the "TWIST" is put in Colonial Bread. See the huge accurate machines carefully blend and bake Colonial Bread. You are welcome at all times, including Sunday. You'll enjoy the visit.

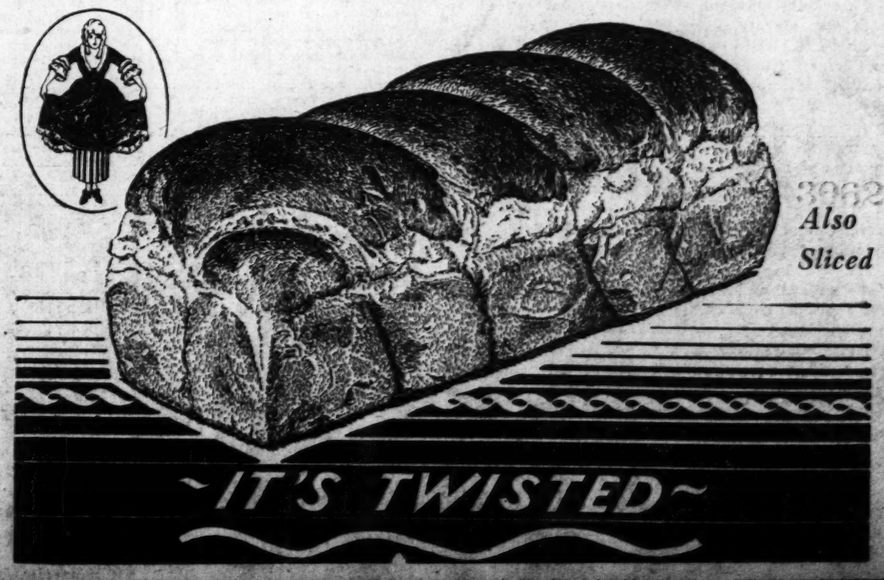

The exclusive Colonial twisting process used in making Colonial Bread is the greatest discovery the baking industry has made in years.

The twisting process is NOT a fad—it is NOT a novelty. Twisting plays a very important part in giving you a better bread—better in flavor and food value.

Untwisted bread must be fermented one-third longer—that is why you get one-third more real bread flavor and one-third more food value in the twisted Colonial loaf than in ordinary bread.

Remember—no bread is as good as it could be until it is twisted.

SENATOR GEORGE'S ADVICE.

In a timely and convincing interview, published in this issue, Senator George presents the deplorable situation which would come in the state should the general assembly fail at the summer session to reduce the congressional districts from 12 to 10, and leave the reapportionment to the next session.

Senator George knows accurately the evil effects upon the state's representative standing should the entire delegation be subjected to statewide election.

There are fixed relations of long service and committee seniorities that would be broken so far as our representatives would be concerned. Those present members who might be returned would find their preferential positions in the house organization displaced and their legislative influence weakened.

The senator also points out that in a statewide election, with 20 to 30 candidates contesting for the 10 nominations, it would be possible, whether probable or not, for one district to name by pluralities all 10 of the congressmen. Certainly, by combination one or more sections of the state, could nominate the entire ticket.

It will not be fair in any sense to thus make sure that some, perhaps most, of the districts of the state would be shorn of direct representation. Nor will it be fair to make all the candidates canvass the entire state at great expense in search of nominations.

As Senator George says, "it is unthinkable" that the general assembly will force such confusions and deprivations upon the people.

The obvious and just thing for the legislature to do is to comply fully with the national law, promptly and equitably redistrict the state, and give to each district the honorable right to choose and elect its own proper representative in the next congress and thereafter until another census may compel another change.

UPHOLD MILITARY SCHOOLS.

In a nation of 122,000,000 persons it is natural there should be found among them many visionaries, faddists, and fanatics of vagarious idiosyncrasies. Of the long list of such that buzz about us the so-called "anti-militarists" are the most flatulent and forbidding.

Their special self-assumed mission is to decry and declaim against the use of military exercises and training in the schools of the country, whether public or private. To men and women old enough to have had experience with the military transactions of the nation such anti-militarist propaganda is pestiferous. Its aim can be nothing less than to leave the people unlearned, untrained and unfit for self defense in any emergency that the greed or hate of other powers may force upon our country.

The late World War is an illustration. Had the generation of 1917 been without previous military training in part, and had we not had the veteran officers and men of the Spanish War army and navy to call upon to organize and command them it would have taken a much longer time for us to enter that conflict in fighting condition. Most of the effective commanders of our American expeditionary force in France were veterans of the war with Spain.

The ordinary military training given our youth in the schools does not create in them a thirst for blood and war. If it did our recruiting stations all over the country would be crowded with young men hungering to enlist in army, navy, or marine corps.

Military training is man-making, character-forming, and an insurance of necessary national security.

OPPORTUNITY'S FORELOCK.

Thousands of students are now being graduated from the public, denominational and privately operated preparatory schools and colleges of the state. The majority of those thus released from books and classes will need, for personal and economic necessities, to employments in the actual business world, but most of them will find themselves unfitted for the technical positions needing help.

As times quicken the business pace and new forces are needed in stores, offices, factories and other commercial establishments, the fittest for the jobs are sure to be preferred. Business concerns are no longer training schools for apprentices as in an elder day. Now they demand at their doors the credentials of competency from every seeker of a place in their personnel.

The commercial and technical training schools are being more relied upon every year to supply men and women for the special service of everyday business. They are wise young men and women who transfer themselves from their prep schools to the training rooms of the special business colleges that now offer to equip them for quick employment and satisfying efficiency in their avocations.

Nothing is more certain these days than that the untrained are sure to be distanced by the skilled and that business will have few uses for them.

THE ONE CERTAIN CURE.

Secretary of Commerce Robert P. Lamont in his address before the 19th annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States stressed the necessity of putting every possible man to work in order to hasten the return of prosperous times.

No other problem of the depression, he declared, so peculiarly demands co-operative handling as that of unemployment. Not only must the big industries which work hundreds of thousands of men, keep every man possible on the job, but the commercial concerns, large and small, must go the limit in providing a living wage for as many men and women as they possibly can.

In picturing the effect of unemployment on industry and commerce in every community of the country, Secretary Lamont said:

Enforced idleness and loss of income endanger the security and welfare of the individual and his family. They also mean curtailed operations and shrinking profits to business enterprise, for unemployed labor implies also unemployed capital. The worker is both producer and consumer, and when he finds himself without a job and without income, business has lost a buyer. Hence, the employer who finds it necessary to contract his own operations and discharge his workers is helping to curtail the market for his own goods and those of other producers, and is thereby further aggravating a situation of which he himself is a victim. This vicious circle of unemployment, curtailed purchasing power, and then further unemployment is an evil from which our own and other commercial countries have suffered at recurrent intervals ever since the dawn of this industrial age.

The indisputable fact that the United States has progressed far from the comparatively crude economic conditions of the seventies, eighties and nineties makes the clearing up of the unemployment situation incident to the present depression much easier to solve.

Especially is this true with regard to the money and credit system. As a result of the steadying influence of the federal reserve bank system, manufacturers and merchants can now secure funds to help bring back prosperity which were utterly unobtainable in previous depressions.

The quick and certain way to hasten the return of good times is for every employer of labor, of whatever nature it may be, to not only keep the wheels of commerce moving by retaining every employe, but to accelerate their speed by giving jobs to some of those who, because of unemployment, are retarding the return of prosperity.

A wise old republican says that "if the democrats don't fumble so as to re-elect Hoover his goose is already cooked!" Something for democratic leaders to ponder.

New Jersey republicans back Senator Morrow's demand for a state rights treatment of the prohibition problem. Of course, that's a question for the morrow.

Will Rogers is to attend the Methodist Ecumenical conference here in Atlanta in October, but what can he hope to rope in that rodeo?

The liquor supply, like the old darkey's cyclone, seems to be "comin' fum ebery whars at once!"

Night baseball is a sort of "fly-by-night" game, as it were.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

The Case of Mata Hari.

The case of Mata Hari, the exotic Oriental dancer who once thrilled the capitals of Europe with the frenzy of her interpretative mystical Hindu dances, is not finished.

Some time or other, perhaps in the near future, the case threatens to inject itself into French poltics.

Mata Hari died before a firing squad at Vincennes, near Paris, at dawn on October 15, 1917. To the very end she maintained her innocence. She admitted having had relations with several leading French politicians and to have been at one time a favorite of the German crown prince and also the chief of the German intelligence service at Berlin, but she stoutly refused to admit that she ever had been in the pay of the world-wide German spy organization.

On the other hand the court-martial that condemned her to die the death of a traitor and spy found sufficient proof to say that Mata Hari personally was responsible for the death of at least one whole French army corps, that is to say 21,000 soldiers.

It was the unanimous verdict of the court that Mata Hari's sinister machinations at Madrid had specially benefited the German submarines operating off the coast of Spain, so much so that, through information directly traceable to her, the undersea craft were able to locate and torpedo no fewer than 18 French troop ships on their way from north Africa to Marseilles and Toulon.

After exhaustive investigations which included a perusal of all the documents relating to her trial, an examination of the dancer's domestic affairs through marriage papers, birth certificates and letters written in Dutch, and conversations with the physician and nurse who accompanied her from the St. Lazare prison in Paris to the field of execution at Vincennes, I am in a position to say that Mata Hari, who was not gifted with any remarkable shrewdness or intelligence, may perhaps have been an unwitting tool in the hands of clever super-spies who abandoned her to her fate when she fell into the clutches of the French security police.

Mata Hari was a Dutch woman. All reports to the contrary are false. She had not a drop of Javanese or Hindu blood in her veins.

Her birth certificate, which I saw in the bureau of communal statistics at Leeuwarden, in Holland, shows that she was born in that city in August, 1876. Her name was Margereta Gertruda Zelle.

Her father was for some time burgomaster of the near-by little city of Franeker, a typical Dutch town, criss-crossed by canals along which barges drift lazily out to the North Sea.

The name Mata Hari ("Ray of Sunlight") she adopted much later after a visit to the Dutch East Indies.

The young Dutch girl made her debut in Paris in 1903 at a fashionable soiree. It was not until 1905 that she appeared in public and scored a triumph comparable only to the phenomenal successes of a Sarah Bernhardt, another Dutch woman by descent.

Mata Hari danced nude. Over her shoulders hung thin straps of chiseled silver. Her long arms were covered with scintillating bracelets.

Her body seemed more supple than that of a serpent. She whirled till the eye could no longer follow her undulations. Then suddenly she would straighten out and reveal herself the beautiful woman, the dignified danseuse whom we had seen before she threw the whole audience into an ecstasy of delight.

It was more than anything else the sensational, we might almost say the delirious, character of her mystic Oriental dances that made Mata Hari a favorite at the courts of Europe.

Though for many years Mata Hari was the milieu of Europe's most brilliant circles, adored and loved by princes and statesmen, none of these men, who at one time would have stooped in the dust for one of her magic smiles, came to her defense during the long months that she was incarcerated in the damp and miserable cell of St. Lazare prison.

Stories circulating to the effect that Mata Hari was kept in a cell that had been transformed into a sort of luxurious boudoir, where she received many of her former admirers and even had her couch heaped each night with piles of flowers, are nothing but a myth.

Mata Hari believed till the last that she would be released. One of her lawyers comforted her with the story that the whole plan of her execution was but a sham to deceive the Germans. She remembered this story well and on the way to Vincennes her glances sought the lawyer among the group of "invited guests" who were to witness her execution. When she did not see him she declared: "He is afraid: he has not enough courage to tell me now that his whole story was pure invention. I am going to die and I am not afraid."

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

Respecting the War of the Sixties and the Inevitableness of It.

On Saturday, "Memorial Day," Professor Ulrich Bonnell Phillips, professor of American history at Yale University, made the address of the occasion and necessarily made references to the Civil War, its genesis, political character and results.

Since Professor Phillips is a Georgian, born at LaGrange in late 1877, taking his degrees of A. B. and A. M. at the University of Georgia and serving as a historical professor in several southern and northern universities since, what he says or writes about the "War of the Sixties," as he describes it, has interest for those of us in the south who have survived it and our children, whom we want to correctly understand it.

I cannot doubt for a moment the sincerity of the views expressed by Professor Phillips and can allow for his purely historical convictions.

* * * *

A Strangely Sublimated Opinion.

Only a few sentences of the address were reported in the Associated Press report to The Constitution of Sunday, but they were salient enough to cause a strong disposition to dissent from some of their implications.

Professor Phillips described the Civil War as a "calamity of misguided zeal and blundering."

I take it that he refers to the "misguided zeal" of those persons in the east and north who formed the first anti-slavery societies and fomented the religio-political propaganda that the "damnable institution" of slavery in the south should be summarily and plenarily abolished, in spite of constitutional allowance and the laws of property rights.

That zeal was represented by ex-President John Quincy Adams, who was returned to congress, to make his furious and famous fight for the right to present and have recorded innumerable petitions for the destruction of slavery in the south.

* * *

Our Southern Blunders.

Perhaps, too, Professor Phillips assigns the "blundering" preliminary to the war to the leaders of the southern people, who warned that the slavery rights and properties of the south would eventually, if at all, have to be defended and saved by guns and battle.

There were many southern leaders, who did not so hold—among them men like Andrew Johnson, Ben Hill, Zeb Vance, Judge Sharkey and scores of others.

Professor Phillips has published a "Life of Robert Toombs," a book on "Georgia and States Rights," and edited "The Correspondence of Robert Toombs, Alexander H. Stephens and Howell Cobb."

From studies in those sources, he should have learned the real reasons which impelled them to sanction and serve the cause of southern secession, and that they and their coparceners did not believe they were "blundering," but rather daring to obey the highest commands of patriotism.

* * * *

Was the Conflict Irrepressible?

It was William H. Seward, senator from New York, who, in a speech at Rochester in 1858, said the contest between freedom and slavery was "an irrepressible conflict," and that epithet immediately became the battle slogan of the northern abolitionists—the cry they carried through the Lincoln campaign of 1860.

He had said in the senate when arguing against the admission of Texas that "to maintain the slave-holding power is to subvert the constitution." In the campaign of 1848 he said at Cleveland, "Slavery must be abolished, and you and I must do it!" He was the author of the doctrine of "a higher law than the constitution."

Yet Professor Phillips says that "with every passing year of thoughtful research a belief grows wider and stronger that the War of the Sixties was not an irrepressible conflict."

That may be a cloister conclusion with academicians and doctrinaires, but it will find slight acceptance with those who know the history of those times as it is embalmed.

* * * *

Things To Be Remembered.

It will remain always of record that the scheme of inheritance emancipation proposed by Jefferson, and the African colonization of other visionaries, and the compensatory emancipation facored by Lincoln, had all been ignored by the slave-holders of the south and repudiated by the rabid abolitio.. absolutists of the north.

The growth of the Union through the creation of new states had ceased to be regulated by balancing the admission of a free state with a slave state, for the free states were sure to be the greater in number. The cases of Kansas, Nebraska and California had shown the trend toward the dominion of the free states, and that convinced the south that every interest it had based upon a system of slave labor would be subject to the fanaticism and power of an abolition majority. Professor Phillips could have learned that incontestably from Tombs and Stephens. I did!

* * * *

It Was a Blood Atonement.

Looked at from the angle of divine justice, even now, one must believe that for the sin against human rights committed by the northern slave-traders and the southern slave-buyers and users, a blood atonement had to be made. It has been the way of God with errant man from Adam to Abraham Lincoln and Kaiser William.

Coming up out of those days of the War of the Sixties, having seen the inauguration of the Confederate States at Montgomery in 1861 and heard the seething and flaming of abolition sentiment at the inauguration of Lincoln, I have always had the profound conviction that human wisdom and diplomacy could no more have prevented that war for the fate of slavery than a congression philippic can stay the flowing tides of the oceans.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

BY MOLLIE MERRICK.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 31.—Is it private life for Clara Bow?

With the news that the Bow contract has at last been disposed of to the gratification of all concerned, comes the question—What of Clara from now on?

For many months—since the eventful morning when Daisy De Boe and Clara Bow began spatting for all the world to hear—the question in Hollywood has been: How long will Clara last?

Championed by the men who had made a barrel of money on her, given far more opportunity to get away with good-time antics than the run of Hollywood stars, Clara Bow still seemed to break into that type of print which unmakes the great.

While all the colony wondered when the blow would fall, Clara Bow, recovered from the collapse which the Bow-De Boe trial had brought upon her—and not without cause—returned to her studio and began making another picture.

Reports of her recovery were broadcast. Enthusiasm about her new vehicle was general. Clara Bow was considered such a box-office attraction that she could survive even the wretched notoriety she had fallen into through a series of bad luck coincidences.

Present rumors clearly indicate that Clara Bow was taken out of the picture and Peggy Shannon substituted in her place because producers came to the conclusion that Clara Bow was no longer valuable to them unless she could continue to make the sexy type of picture on which her fame had been founded. And reactions to a more serious type of role which executives had attempted of late, were anything but satisfactory.

Clara's public—her fan public—wanted her as they had seen her. The general public—not radically pro-Bow—didn't want to see this girl capitalizing on the sort of thing which had brought her so much unpleasantness. First rumors of a possible unheaval among the to-be-feared women's club factions, are said to have brought producers to the conclusion that the very heavy salary which Clara Bow has been justly earning all these years, was no longer warrantable.

Clara Bow has brought plenty of money into the coffers of the movie industry, so her salary was the least part of the expense involved. No matter what stories have been circulated about Clara Bow, this precipitated retirement from the public eye will not leave her without plenty of money.

Clara may have bought herself an anklet of blue diamonds, pour le sport. She may have given little Daisy De Boe little two thousand dollar birthday presents. She may have been childish and simple and reckless enough to let every man who crossed her path leave her presence the gainer by valuable presents. But she has not squandered all her income by a long ways.

A provisional caring for part of her finances has been attended to all along. Clara Bow, still in her twenties, faces the same problem which Mary Miles Minter once faced. Retirement from an art which has become an integral factor in the artist's life is difficult at 50. At 20 it is life tragedy.

But Clara Bow is a very good actress in her correct medium. And the stage will probably be waiting with open arms for a vaudeville tour, when she is able to be at work again. The public in general—pro-Bow and anti-Bow—will flock to look at the girl who has had more front-page spreads than anyone else since Anna Held gave the world the milk bath to chatter over, and Gaby Deslys took over the fake pearls.

Board of Health Issues Warning Against 'Miracle' Cancer Cures

The state board of health Sunday released the first of seven articles written by Dr. James L. Campbell, of Atlanta, chairman of the cancer commission of the Medical Association of Georgia, with the announcement that the series was prepared largely for the purpose of warning the public against "miraculous" cures.

"It is the desire of the state board of health," the announcement said, "that the people be brought to a realization that a miraculous cure for cancer probably will never come, that its treatment and cure, like those of tuberculosis, lie close at hand and may be had by close contact with the medical profession and strict observance of the rules laid down by qualified medical practitioners."

Cites Founding of Commission.

Dr. Campbell's first article was devoted principally to the history of the cancer commission, which was created at Savannah in the spring of 1917. Before that time, he said, little or no effort had been made to educate the people in public health problems.

"Nothing was known by the public about the nature of cancer," he wrote, "except the information gained from the flaring advertisements of quack doctors who pictured all 'eating sores' as cancer to be cured only by the special treatment just discovered or developed by a doctor who had secured his information from the last surviving medicine man of a tribe of Indians. In reality the 'cure' consisted of some arsenical or antimony paste as ancient as the Ten Commandments, for nearly all of them were originated in Egypt 3,500 years ago."

Dr. Campbell recalled the early difficulties of the cancer commission, operating without funds and with many of the members of the medical association in the army. He told of the educational campaign put on by Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman and Dr. Francis Carter Wood, the year after the creation of the commission. He said it was the first such campaign in the south. Dr. Campbell commended the press for co-operation given those men, and given to the commission since.

Familiar With Symptoms.

As the result of such education efforts, Dr. Campbell said, hundreds of people are now familiar with the early symptoms and signs of cancer "and seek the aid of well trained doctors before the disease has progressed beyond the curable stage."

Georgia, he said, is fortunate in having several well equipped centers where adequate diagnostic and treatment facilities are at hand.

"During the lifetime of the cancer commission," he said, "many valuable discoveries have been made and today cancer is no longer the great mysterious entity that it was formerly thought to be. Now we know just what it is: we know that it is purely local in its early stages and can be cured when properly treated. Nevertheless, we are compelled to recognize it as a unique disease—not influenced by any of the preventive measures which inhibit the spread of epidemic, contagious or infectious diseases. The upbuilding of bodily health, social or economic conditions do not influence its progress or prevent its development. It is no respecter of persons and if left alone always ends in death. Only education and prompt co-operation between doctor and patient can control its ravages. Remember, early cancer is curable."

Health Talks

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY

WAS EDISON RIGHT?

There is a familiar tradition that Thomas Edison for years had only four hours of sleep each day. Thirty years ago Edison did assert in an interview that four or five hours sleep is enough for any one in good health. He believed that more sleep than that was unnecessary and positively injurious. He had tried this idea out among his employes and he had found it generally successful. Discount this about 85 per cent for natural desire of employes to please the boss.

A New Jersey correspondent asks me why I insist that most persons require not less than eight hours sleep. He and his wife were so much impressed by Edison's argument that they both tried it out some 25 years ago. At first they didn't like it so well, but after a month or so they got used to it, as Edison had told them, and ever since they have averaged only four or five hours' sleep daily. Both are well and feel rather better than they did when they wasted eight or 10 hours in bed. Now at the age of 67 my New Jersey friend likes to lie in bed as long as he can sleep, but he still regards the eight-hour rule as a superstition to which we doctors cling for no particular reason.

Now that you put it in that way, I dunno. Always heretofore I have assumed that we had plenty of scientific evidence to support the dictum that a man must have eight hours sleep. But when I begin scrambling around to find the evidence it isn't to be found.

Maybe there is something in this crazy notion of Edison's, after all.

I've often thought there might be, when I've had to listen to the plaintive song of the bird who suffers with insomnia. Then here one night recently, owing to an uncomfortable shoulder due to injury, I couldn't sleep and I—well, in the morning I asserted quite solemnly that I never had a wink of sleep all night, though I'd hate to take an oath to that. Probably I had several hours of fitful dozes, which are just as good, if not so pleasant, as a long slumber. But to hear me tell it the next morning . . .

Another observation that makes me think Edison's idea is not so bad, is that, so far as I can judge, I am quite as well and as efficient when I spend only six hours in bed as I am when I snooze 9 or 10 hours. But remember, I'm Old Doc Brady. I do not recommend any skimping on the hay time for youngsters.

Sedentary persons, those who live by their wits, parasites, work dodgers, bums, loafers, bridge bugs, white collar folk, executives, teachers, lawyers and the like, require less hay time than honest working people, golfers, hikers, hunters, fishermen, cops, burglars and housekeepers. The functioning of the brain or other parts of the nervous system uses little or no energy and necessitates little or no repair or recuperation.

BLIND TENOR PLEASES IN ATLANTA CONCERT

A striking demonstration of what the blind can accomplish if given proper training was afforded Sunday afternoon in a program featuring Leland Logan, of New York, famous blind tenor, and Paul Donehoo, Atlanta's own blind coroner, presented as a part of the local observance of Educational Week for the Blind at the Capitol theater. Appearing in vocal numbers with Mr. Logan was Miss Rita Gilbert, of New York, soprano.

With Channing Cope, retiring district governor of the Lions Club, which sponsored the entertainment, presiding, the program opened with an address of welcome by Mrs. Harry G. Poole, chairman of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs' special committee for co-operation with the Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind. Mrs. Louis Elsas, general chairman, was out of the city.

A duet by Miss Gilbert and Mr. Logan and solos by each artist followed, including Verdi's "La Donna e Mobile," by Mr. Logan, and Grieg's "Ein Traum," by Miss Gilbert. The couple concluded the first part of the program with a duet from Verdi's "La Traviata" in costume.

Other duet numbers presented in costume included a scene from Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado," the Saint Sulpice scene from "Manon," and "Sweetheart" from "Maytime." Other solos by Miss Gilbert were: "The Great Farewell," "My Message" and "Perpetual Motion." Musicians appearing on the program were Mary Griffith Dobbs, Gail Cain, Elinor Wilkinson, Lucien Thomson, Irene Leftwich and Coroner Paul Donehoo.

Especially well-received by the audience was Coroner Donehoo's "memory test" in which figures called out by the audience were placed arbitrarily beside numerals ranging from one to ten. When the black-board was well filled with these confused symbols, Mr. Donehoo, despite his blindness, recited them all in proper order, as they had been called out by the audience.

An eloquent appeal for support of the Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind, which is functioning under difficulties owing to its small membership, was made by Charles B. Hayes, field director of the American Foundation for the Blind, in an address forming one of the main features of the program.

Beginning today, a complete exhibit of work now being done for the blind will be on view at the Palais Peachtree, 452 Peachtree street. The exhibit, which remains open till Wednesday, will include an exposition of methods used in teaching the blind, a comprehensive demonstration of all professional activities in which the blind may engage, after proper instruction, and a large variety of articles manufactured by the blind, a more widespread market for which is being sought by the American Foundation.

During the week different religious denominations will have charge of activities. Today the Jewish, United Liberal and Congregational groups will take charge under the chairmanship of Mrs. Sam Levy. On Tuesday, the Methodist and Christian groups, with Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Mrs. Edgar Craighead and Mrs. Clarence Stauffer, as chairmen. On Wednesday will be Presbyterian, Episcopal and Lutheran groups, from 10:30 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon. From 3 to 5 will be the Catholic group with Mrs. May McAlpin and Mrs. Hall Hanley as chairmen.

During these days, lectures will be given on the education of the blind, industries for the blind and the prevention of blindness. J. J. Childs will give a talk on how the blind child is taught in our public schools. The admission is free. A luncheon will be served each day. Price 50 cents. The proceeds will be given to the Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind.

PICCARD, AIDE RETURN TO STARTING POINT

AUGSBURG, Bavaria, May 31.—(UP)—Professor Piccard and Charles Kipfer, who made a scientific balloon flight into the stratosphere last week, returned here today to their starting point. They were welcomed by a large crowd and a reception in their honor was given by municipal authorities.

Teach Your Horse the Way Home and He Will Follow It When You Are Lost

By Robert Quillen

A planter who lives near this village was awakened one night by the screaming of horses. His stable was afire. It was too late to bring the horses through any of the usual exits, but at one end of the stable was an unused door that had been nailed shut. Under ordinary circumstances the opening of this door would have required a hammer or a crowbar, yet the planter was able to tear it loose with his bare hands.

Did the frenzy of desperation give him new strength? Certainly not. The strength was in his muscles and tendons before he had need of it. It was not subject to the call of his conscious mind, for he never had trained himself to use it; but it was there, ready to serve, when he "lost his head" and his subconscious mind assumed control of his muscles.

What is this subconscious mind?

Henry James says it controls 90 per cent of our mental effort.

It causes the heart to beat, the lungs to expand and contract, the glands to function. And as every motion of your hand is made in obedience to a command from your conscious mind, so every heart beat and every gland action waits for a command from your subconscious mind.

Suppose a gland isn't functioning properly. Could it be forced to do its duty if the subconscious mind gave command? Beyond doubt. But how can you direct the subconscious mind to give such a command?

The answer to that question will solve most of mankind's problems.

Can it be answered? This much at least we know: That the subconscious mind can be trained.

The first time you steer a car, every movement requires conscious thought; but after you have learned to drive, you guide the car perfectly while your conscious mind is busy with other matters.

Your subconscious mind has learned to drive.

That is the secret. Do anything by conscious effort a sufficient number of times and your subconscious mind acquires the habit.

You can teach your subconscious mind what you will and then it will control you.

Think consciously in terms of failure and your subconscious mind learns the habit and automatically directs your failures.

You can, by taking thought, direct your subconscious mind to wake you at 5 o'clock. Why not, by the same process, direct your subconscious mind to develop all of your latent powers?

British 'Dole' Had Genesis In Unemployment Insurance

This is the second of a series of articles on the dole, written after several weeks of investigation in England. The series presents an unprejudiced discussion of the dole, and an analysis of its disadvantages and its benefits.

BY CYRIL ARTHUR PLAYER.

(Copyright, 1931, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

LONDON, May 31.—These are the ingredients of the economic problem in Great Britain:

After ten years of persistent unemployment there is from week to week approximately 20 per cent of the entire industrial population without work.

For unemployment benefit little short of three billion dollars has been distributed during the last ten years.

The annual cost of all the social services, including unemployment, health, widows' and orphans' and old age pensions, education, housing, poor law, etc., is around two billion dollars.

Taxation today absorbs approximately one-fourth of the total income of the whole nation.

Compared with the fiscal year, 1913-1914, there has been an increase of 250 per cent on public expenditure, while the volume of export trade shows a decrease of 20 per cent.

While the rates of unemployment have been raised, and the qualifications for benefit widely liberalized, the cost of living today is only 55 per cent above pre-war, while in 1920 it was 176 per cent above the pre-war figure.

The foregoing is a telescopic view of the chief elements which, when explored, expose the logic of the social service schemes, the perils into which they run, and the lessons to be learned from the experiment. It is a problem that dominates every class of people and every variety of citizen, every industrialist, every employer of labor, every worker—man, woman or child—every politician, statesman and economist, and every taxpayer. In ubiquity of discussion it is to Great Britain what prohibition is to the United States.

Reach 20,000,000.

It is probable the benefit payments have reached not fewer than 20,000,000 persons and their dependents. Every individual receiving benefit earns less than $1,250 a year when steadily employed.

The medium through which this changing army is sustained in "good, physical condition" is know as "the dole." Officialy there is no such thing as a dole. Actually, in the early years of the scheme, there was no dole. Unemployment benefit was an insurance contract on an actuarial basis. Today, due to emergency and crisis, there is a dole, even though it is still not officially recognized as that.

The process by which the state came to the point of comprehensive social service is a long one, the main points in which must be mentioned to demonstrate the logical evolution of the present situation.

The idea of unemployment insurance first attracted the practical attention of the friendly societies and trade unions. The former, devoted more particularly to sick benefit and funeral costs, made some relatively small efforts to solve the intermittent employment problem of their members and also, in a few cases, issued money relief during slack times. By 1905 a total of 122 societies was interested in this phase of relief, with a total membership of 75,000. Obviously, this was not anything of a national scheme.

Unions Prove Theory.

It was the trade unions which really broke ground and proved, by trial and error, the fundamentals of unemployment insurance; in fact, when the state entered the field it was more than glad to profit by the experience of the trade unions; however, had it held fast to the principles thus established, the financial problem (as distinct from the social problem) would not exist here today.

By 1904 81 of the 100 principal unions, with a membership of 950,000, were distributing benefit to unemployed members. This benefit varied in form; sometimes it was travel money for a member to seek work some distance away; sometimes it was a straight allowance, which usually was from $2.50 to $3 a week, although in some few cases it went as high as $5. It is important to note certain principles on which this relief was based.

There was a fixed maximum number of weeks for which benefit might be allowed, either continuously or within a given year.

Benefit could begin only after a "waiting period," during which the unemployed was expected to live on his own resources.

The necessary "gap" between a first benefit and a second benefit was carefully although not uniformly defined.

The relief rate was not supposed to equal the customary income of the unemployed, and in fact rarely was sufficient for subsistence.

Sound Plan.

This represents a thoroughly sound plan, taking into consideration the elements involved. The contributors were limited to the number of members in the trade union; the contributions came from men of relatively small income, and the conditions of benefit were fixed accordingly.

The "waiting period" is vital to any unemployment insurance scheme, for the first few days are the easiest for the unemployed to finance themselves, and the most expensive for any insurance fund to meet. The individuals out of work for one or two days will be a very large number, the number for a week, lower, for a month, lower yet, for six months still lower, and so on. The "waiting period" customarily is six days.

On the whole unemployment in those years, say from 1896 to 1905, followed normal cycles, and the fat years took care of the lean. During the period named these 81 unions paid out for unemployment benefit 22 per cent of their total expenditure, or approximately $18,750,000. This experiment was a great advance over the friendly societies, and was big enough to develop principles on which unemployment insurance could be studied.

Still, it affected, as noted, only 950,000 workmen, while all the trade union workers in the country then numbered probably 1,900,000.

That was in 1905. So impressed was the country with the working of the scheme and with its solvency in operation that between 1905 and 1910 the number of workers insured through trade unions mounted to 1,500,000, and the whole plan attracted the lively interest of poor law authorities. In fact, the poor law commission recommended, in 1910, that either state or municipality should contribute to the benefit with a view to extending the system.

Only Fraction.

It was realized that the trade unions could provide for only a fraction of the wage-earning population, which then totalled something like 8,000,000 adult males between 20 and 50 years old, and an unregistered number of women and young persons.

From 1904 to 1908 there were bad years which demonstrated the need of some centralized state-directed effort to meet general depression. The successful operation of unemployment benefit by the trade unions not only offered a basis for the erection of a staff plan, but suggested that unemployment was measurable and could be insured against at a moderate premium which could be diminished in proportion as the field of insurance was extended.

Everything visible at this time was on a sound actuarial basis, such as any insurance company could estimate into schedules. The trade unions, real pioneers in the movement, had demonstrated the idea at their own risk, born of necessity, and had proved their case that the grim nightmare of the out-of-work could be insured against. The point is worth remembering.

Compulsory insurance, as a state enterprise, first made its appearance in Great Britain when Lloyd George was chancellor of the exchequer, in the liberal ministry of Prime Minister Asquith, under part II of the national insurance act of 1911, the extent of benefit allowed was proportionate to contributions paid. The plan was limited to selected trades, because the goverument of that day was frankly experimenting, and expected to build the scheme on a basis of experience gained. The trades selected were, broadly, building, engineering and shipbuilding, on the basis that workmen in these trades were subject to heavy risk of unemployment.

It is interesting to note that the mining industry, which has become so emergent a problem, was excluded from the scheme, because the unemployment risk was considered to be (or up to that time had been) almost nominal. The amount of unemployment among miners had been so small that it was expected at one time this industry would contract out of any general scheme and establish a special scheme of its own, to get the advantage of its own superior conditions.

Experimental Act.

Admittedly, the act of 1911 was experimental. The selected trades affected 2,250,000 manual workers in trades which were peculiarly susceptible to periodic fluctuations of prosperity.

Notably, the act adopted the fundamentals of the trade union schemes—voluntary schemes, so to speak—and emphasized the underlying principle that the insured trades should help to maintain, through ties of depression and unemployment, the reserves of labor they required in seasons of good employment.

Further, the state adopted the fundamental that the employed person and his employer should contribute in equal proportions to the insurance fund, and that the state, on public grounds and to make the scheme more attractive to the compulsory insured contributor, should make a somewhat similar contribution.

Thus the famous and successful triple contribution came into existence. The rates of contribution were low—employer and employed contributing five cents each and the state something like three cents. The benefits also were low, the top allowance for persons of eighteen years and more being $1.75 weekly. In the main, the conditions followed trade union practice. There was a "waiting period" before benefit could be sought, and there was the "one-in-five" rule, which meant that for every five contributions paid the claim was entitled to one week's benefit and no more. Also, no person might draw more than fifteen weeks on benefit during an insurance year (July to July).

NEW YORK HUNTS BUTCHER KILLER

Body of Fiendish "Sex Murderer's" Victim Recovered By Parts.

NEW YORK, May 31.—(UP)—Identity of a fiendish "sex butcher" and his victim whose dismembered body is being recovered bit by bit was sought after discovery of two packages today containing additional parts of the butchered body.

The head, two forearms, two feet and two hands of a man about 35 years old, with curly brown hair, apparently fastidious in personal appearance, were in the packages found early Sunday in a vacant lot at Morgan avenue and Ten Eyck street, Brooklyn.

The victim had been dead at least two months, examining surgeons said, and police linked the discoveries, then, with discovery previously of other parts of a human body, March 27 and April 12, in approximately the same sections of the metropolitan district.

Extreme Brutality.

"Extreme brutality of the butcher was apparent," police said. "From the manner in which certain parts of the body were cut and hacked, as though with a meat cleaver or ax, leading to the conclusion the killing was a 'sex murder' of the most vicious type."

The packages found today were uncovered by Policeman Gotlieb Gauler and his father who had gone to the vacant lot to seek top soil. One was wrapped in a New York Daily News of April 16; the other in a Brooklyn Daily Eagle of March 26.

The head was in one package. Other parts were in the second package.

Still a third package found near by contained a silk shirt, several pieces of a man's silk underwear, and a pair of women's bloomers.

The man, apparently 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing 160 pounds, had carefully manicured fingernails.

Police believe other portions of the same man's body were those found March 27 and April 12, the first a thigh found wrapped in paper on the Brooklyn end of Williamsburg bridge.

A few days later a large section of a human chest was found in a near-by lumber yard, and the next day at the foot of Grand street in the East river a human calf, a thigh and two upper arms were found. Parts of hips were found April 12 in Glenndale.

"Rail distribution of freight as measured by carloadings has shown normal seasonal expansion in March and again in April but shipments of merchandise in the latter month increased less than usual. Dollar sales of department stores in April after allowance for seasonal trend and the early date of Easter, increased by 8 per cent from March to April and in the latter month were less than 2 per cent below the total for April, 1930, and less than 5 per cent below that of April, 1929, despite the decline in retail prices during the last two years."

TEAGUE CLAIMS GAIN FOR 'CO-OPS'

Retiring Chairman Says Past Two Years Saw Much Progress.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(AP)—Charles C. Teague resigned as vice chairman of the farm board with the conviction that "during the last two years more progress has been made in co-operative marketing than has been made in any previous 10-year period."

He told President Hoover so in a letter of resignation made public today, in which he set forth the development of co-operatives as the board's most important work.

Teague, whose resignation becomes effective tomorrow after serving a year beyond his regular appointment, said that during his service "I have never observed any action influenced by section or politics," and added:

"It was indeed fortunate, during the present serious economic condition through which the country has been passing, that the farmers of the country have had this important legislation (agricultural marketing act) with adequate finances and administered by a group of men of your selection, who have such a deep and sympathetic attitude toward the problems of agriculture."

Speaking of cotton and wheat price stabilization endeavors, Teague said "it has, of course, been impossible to be helpful under these most difficult and trying conditions without at times taking some chances of loss to the revolving fund.

"Had it been administered as a banking trust or fund," he continued, "it would have been of little help to agriculture under existing conditions."

He termed price stabilization efforts entirely justified and predicted benefits to agriculture and business "far outweighing any cost to the treasury."

Journalism Needs Trained Men, Fred Fuller Shedd Declares

BY B. R. CRISLER.

In an age when newspapers are covering more diverse fields of activity than ever before, the primary need of the profession is trained men, according to Fred Fuller Shedd, president of the National Society of Newspaper Editors and Publishers, of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, who will address the convention of the National Editorial Association this afternoon at Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

And Mr. Shedd is doing what he can to provide that training, more essential than ever now, he says, when newspapers no longer have the time to develop untrained men. Since last October, for instance, he has traveled some 25,000 miles, telling students in schools of journalism throughout the country how to become newspapermen. And the campaign is getting on, he says. Definite progress is being made.

But the ideal would be, he thinks, to have the educational standards in schools of journalism as fixed as they are in law schools and medical schools. The knowledge required by a practitioner in one of the various branches of journalism, he points out, is vaster and in its way quite as explicit as that required by a doctor or a lawyer.

And the demand for men equipped in this fashion, he says, is unlimited. Probably trained foreign correspondents, political reporters, news and feature writers, critics, copy-readers are needed more now than ever before, but production in the modern newspaper plant has been so much accelerated that it is no longer possible to train them on the job, he says, as it was in the past.

Moreover, the standards of public taste are rising so rapidly, he says, that the journalist of shoddy education can be tolerated no longer in the profession. Public interest is turning to international affairs, science, literature and the arts as never before, he declares, and the newspaper that fails to serve this increasingly cultivated public is preparing its own downfall.

Mr. Shedd, whose paper hasn't discharged one member of its staff during the present period of economic uncertainty, foresees a steady recovery for business in general and a particularly bright future for the newspaper business. "I have been in the game since 1886," he says, "and I consider it a better field for the young man today than it ever was."

He is specially enthusiastic about weekly papers and small-town dailies as a medium for the young journalist, or the veteran with capital to invest. The influence of such papers has grown steadily in the past few years, he says, and they are now attracting some of the nation's leading journalists.

But it was explained to the wool men that their industry had no funds provided as in the case of cotton interests, and therefore the government could not at this time initiate a wool "week."

During the week, too, cotton will be worn at numerous social functions and at numbers of graduation exercises at Georgia schools.

Cason J. Callaway, of LaGrange, one of the most active leaders in the industry and president of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, has estimated that more than 200 miles of store windows throughout the country will be devoted to a display of cotton goods and products during the week.

The sale of more cotton goods was discussed Sunday night by T. M. Forbes, secretary of the Georgia Cotton Manufacturers' Association in a radio address.

"The national cotton week program is no sentimental or patriotic movement," he said, "but it makes an emotional appeal to us just because we happen to live in this section of the country where cotton is grown and fabricated.

"It is based on sound economic principles and good business practice. In Georgia alone there are 65,000 people employed in cotton mills and fully 400,000 farmers engaged in growing the million and a half bales of cotton produced in Georgia each year. These mill employes and farmers together with their families include nearly 2,000,000 Georgia citizens who look to cotton for their income and support and whose purchasing power is regulated and limited by economic conditions in this great industry."

WHITE CLOTHING VOGUE IN MEMPHIS FOR WEEK

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 31.—(AP)—Members of the Memphis Cotton Exchange will set the pace in the observance of cotton week in Memphis by making white suits their official business garb for the week. High School Graduates Will Now Prepare for Positions At Southern Business College

Vacation Time the Busiest Time at The Southern.

Most of the academic schools have closed for vacation, and many of their graduates are making their way to the Southern Business College to be prepared for commercial positions.

Business conditions are improving, though slowly, but wise young people say that now is the time to make preparation for prosperity ahead, and many of them will, therefore, enroll at the Southern during June to begin business courses in the school which has been accredited by the National Association of Accredited Commercial Schools, and whose courses were designed and approved by the Commercial Division of the United States Bureau of Education.

It gives prestige to those young people, when applying for positions, who can say that they are graduates of the Southern Shorthand and Business University.

Ask all Atlanta to cite you to a real good business school. Efficiency counts and the Southern's graduates are reputed for their great efficiency.

"The salary you name is $25 per month more than we have been paying," said the manager of a big firm to a student of the Southern, when the student was applying for a position.

"Just try me out and see if I'm worth the difference," replied the pupil.

"That student you sent me, who demanded more salary than I had been paying, has proved the best stenographer I ever employed and her salary has already been increased considerably above that at which she began," said the business man.

Enroll now. Get ready for the prosperous times coming. Several of the Southern's students have just gone to nice positions. Call, phone or write for catalog. Address L. W. Arnold, President, 86 Whitehall Street, S. W., Atlanta, Ga.—(adv.)

CRACKERS REST AS CLUB HEADS QUEST PITCHER

Wires Spray Big League Territory; Carrithers Is Considered.

By Ed Danforth.

Now and then the Crackers get a break. A break in baseball means a stroke of good fortune, and in this particular instance it means a game rained out yesterday in Nashville.

Dizzy from alternately squinting at floodlights and blinking at the sun, rocked from head to foot by the strain of losing game after game by one or two runs, the Crackers were in an ideal state to profit by a day of rest.

In fact, if it rained today in Nashville and the boys could go to a picture show, it would be another helping of gravy. But the possibility is that it will not rain and the Crackers will have to play a game in the afternoon and another under Nashville's lighting system. Yes, they have one, too.

News from baseball headquarters here was startling. A deal is on for a new pitcher.

R. J. Spiller, business manager, after some deep thinking, got busy last night by telegraph and sprayed the major leagues with yellow blanks asking for a pitcher. The pitcher must be one who can step in and win without argument here right now, Mr. Spiller says.

The staff is short handed, with "Jughandle Johnny" Morrison sick abed. And the lads who have been doing such good pitching and getting so little batting support are pretty well worn out in the arm.

While shopping around in major league circles, the Crackers have a weather eye on a young man they sent to Florence, S. C., in the Palmetto league. Jim Carrithers, former University of Georgia star, who was here in spring training, was sent to Florence and has done nothing but win eight games in eight starts. This is pitching in any league. Carrithers is an ace in the hole.

The Crackers play in Nashville today. They have an off day Tuesday. Then they play three games in two days at Birmingham, and return home for a game Friday and two games Saturday with the Vols.

The Friday game will be played at night—ladies night—and perhaps one of the Saturday games will be played after supper. The Cracker officials want to try out the Saturday night idea once more. They are not yet convinced that it is a poor night.

It is just as well that the Crackers are away in foreign parts beginning their climb back into first division. It has been said that the club was worn out physically and mentally in the Chattanooga series. Well, so were the fans.

Forty-five thousand, five hundred folks scrambled into the park last week in five night games and two matinees to blink at the lights. The intense excitement generated by so many baseball bugs is exhausting to those who participate in the grandstand or on the field.

Cracker officials as well as soda fountain sages can sit back now and review the evidence and after a fashion render a decision.

SOME FIGURES.

In the first seven games of the season—all held in the afternoon—the Crackers played to 27,382 paid admissions. Of this number, the opening game, with all its ballyhoo, drew 17,201.

The remaining day games drew 10,181, or an average of 1,697. Baseball was new then, and the Crackers were winning their share of games.

The last seven games played in Spiller field drew 45,500, of whch 31,335 were paid admissions. Only two of these were day games and these two drew a total of 3,106, an average of 1,553.

The five night games drew 28,229 more than attended the first SEVEN day games, which was an average of 5,646. This crowd was drawn when the Crackers were losing games at the rate of 9 out of 11. Presumably the figures would have been greater if the club had been in a winning mood.

The average paid attendance for day games in these two periods, exclusive of that big opening game, was 1,625.

The average paid attendance for night games was 5,646. In addition two of the night games drew 12,500 women admitted free on those nights.

That is how night baseball stacks up for the club owners.

WHY THEY CAME.

The novelty of the lighting idea brought them out in droves. Furthermore there are more people in the Atlanta district from which to draw a night crowd.

Statistic sharps, by studying the census sheets, have estimated that there are 50,000 people within easy access of the ball park whose business permits them to attend day games and 400,000 who can attend at night.

Even after the novelty wears off, it is probable that night games will continue to draw more people than daytime games.

THE GIRLS DECIDED IT.

It is fair to say that Atlanta had an overdose of the new sport the first week. The club chiefs were determined to strike while the floodlights were hot. Furthermore they wanted to find out which nights in the week were most popular.

The answer was easy; Tuesday and Friday nights were best. Those were the nights when ladies were admitted free.

Apparently the soprano rooters hold the key to the situation. They want to go to the baseball park when admission is free.

AND AT NIGHT THEY MUST HAVE AN ESCORT, who must pay (the old bromide that the girls must pay being thereby neutralized again).

Thursday night does not seem so attractive. Neither does Saturday night. The master minds among the 15 Millionaires thought Saturday night would be THE one, but they are doubtful now since the last Saturday night game drew only 3,200.

THE BUSINESS PROBLEM.

This may be interesting reading, too, for managers of motion picture houses who were dealt a severe wallop last week.

They are still trying to figure it out—and one or two night games are coming up this week-end to give them more data.

This is not set down with a smile. I am merely interested to see what will happen, how the competition will be met and which side will win out.

Errors Are Plentiful In Major Loop Play

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Errors in profusion were the distinguishing mark of major league baseball through most of last week. Only seven of the 18 big league teams were able to get through with fewer than 10 errors, while the Boston Braves made 18 misplays in nine games and the Pittsburgh Pirates 17 in eight contests. The Philadelphia Athletics and Chicago White Sox were the best of a bad lot when it came to fielding, each making only three errors. The Phillies led the National league, having only four misplays.

TOURBILLON WINS.

LONGCHAMP, France, May 31.—(AP)—Marcel Boussac's Tourbillon, by Ksar out of Durban, won the Prix Lupin Produce stakes, worth $1,700, today. J. Pratt's Cakewalk was second and Baron Edouard De Rothschild's Jus De Raisin third. The winner, a favorite, paid $16.50 for $10.

Arnold To Spend 2 Months in Bed

INDIANAPOLIS, May 31.—(AP)—Billy Arnold, Chicago, will be in the hospital for about two months as a result of injuries received in the 500-miles automobile race here yesterday, Dr. H. R. Allen said today.

Arnold, pace setter for almost 400 miles, lost a wheel, skidded sideways, was in collision with the machine driven by Luther Johnson, South Bend, Ind., and crashed into a retaining wall. Spider Matlock, Los Angeles, who was riding with Arnold, had a small bone broken in a shoulder, but was discharged from the hospital today.

Tony Gulotta, Kansas City; Luther Johnson, Wilbur Shaw, Wild Bill Cummings and Joe Russo, all of Indianapolis; Harry Butcher, Wilmington, Ills., were other racers injured slightly.

BENNING BEATS FORT MAC, 12-8, FOR POLO TITLE

Infantry School Takes Circuit Crown in Good Game.

By Ida Frances Wing.

Carrying top weight and conceding a five-goal handicap, the infantry team from Fort Benning fought its way to the championship of the southern circuit and fourth corps area in the finals played against the Fort McPherson squad yesterday at the military post before several hundred polo fans. The score of 12-8 gives no true estimate of the battle waged between the two squads on the dangerously heavy field.

Rain, which fell in the early afternoon, made the going slow and ponies cleverly avoided going down on the wet turf. Major Gustav H. Franke, of the Fort Mac squad, and Major Lil Lyman, of the infantry team, went down as their ponies slipped, but both remounted unhurt.

Baker, at No. 2 for the infantry outfit, played a pretty brand of polo and kept things humming when he got on the ball. The long-driving Jacobs, who was not up to his usual stellar form in the Fort Bragg game, rushed in with powerful shots and was well worth his four-goal handicap for his squad. Lyman, expert poloist and rider out at No. 1, accounted for four of the goals rung up by the infantry, while Bartlett was cool and consistent at back.

Shubert, at back for the Fort Mac squad, reached heights of form and played both an aggressive defensive game in great fashion. A sensational save of his when the ball had reached the very mouth of the goal brought the spectators to their feet. Franke, who played his final tournament with the squad, fought off opposition with his daring riding and stick work and fed the ball up to Biddle, who was going well at No. 2, and Spettel, hard-riding No. 1, in great style.

Lieutenant Bill Biddle started the local squad off in front in the first chukker by counting from close in to make the score 6 to 0. The Benning four was able to score but once in the session, Jacobs knocking over.

Three goals in the second chukker, two by Major Lyman and one by Jacobs, and two in the third, one each by Lyman and Baker, left the teams tied at 6-6 at the intermission.

Jacobs and Bartlett each scored for Benning in the fourth period to send the invaders into the van, and despite goals by Spettel and Franke for Fort Mac in the fifth chukker, Benning stayed in front by virtue of Baker's tally.

Lyman, Baker and Bartlett each scored in the final chukker to pad the Fort Benning advantage while Fort McPherson was held scoreless.

General George H. Estes presented the United States Polo Association trophy and the Atlanta Horse Show Association cup to the members of the Benning squad. Wesley Moran received the Tampa national guard trophy from General Estes for the Horse Guards' victory in the national guard tourney. The Sixth Cavalry, from Fort Oglethorpe, in the southern circuit, and the 118th Field Artillery, from Savannah, in the guards' tourney, were given consolation trophies. Fort McPherson was presented with trophies as runners-up in the circuit meet.

Members of the Fort McPherson squad presented Major Gustave H. Franke, team captain who leaves shortly for Auburn and his R. O. T. C. duties at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, with a painting by Cecil Aldin, British artist, of Activity, famous English polo pony, in appreciation of his work with polo and at Fort McPherson.

Bozo-Latzo Fight Promises Action

Atlanta's fistic fans are assured of an entertaining evening Tuesday when Battling Bozo and Pete Latzo get together in the main bout in the auditorium, following Ted Goodrich and Spike Webb into the ring.

Bozo and Latzo will furnish plenty of action in their 10-rounder; Goodrich and Webb should put on a fitting apertif to the main attraction.

Bozo won over Murray Gitlitz by a knockout in his last appearance here, and last Monday he knocked off Crackerjack Spike Webb in Birmingham before a packed house.

Latzo is an outstanding light heavyweight and is managed by Jimmy Johnston, who attempted to put on the Carnera-Sharkey fight in New York but was prevented by a court order. Latzo will be accompanied by his manager and a trainer.

Goodrich and Webb have met several times before and have always put on a good exhibition. They have topped other cards, but were forced to second place with the Bozo-Latzo bout also on the schedule.

The auditorium cooling system will be in action for the program, officials have announced. Another announcement of importance sets the admission price for escorted ladies at $1.

Stribling Receives 2 Atlanta Visitors

GEAUGA PARK LAKE, Ohio, May 31.—Two Atlantans showed up at the Stribling camp this afternoon.

Thomas Duys, of the Winecoff hotel, and J. J. Richardson came around and introduced themselves and wished the Stribblings well in the July fight.

AMERICAN ACES SET FOR BATTLE AT CARNOUSTIE

Many Given Chances as British Open Play Starts Today.

By Frank H. King.

Associated Press Staff Writer.

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland, May 31. (AP)—Great Britain's greatest golfing competition, the open championship, gets under way in this ancient stronghold of the game tomorrow.

A heavy rain and high wind kept most of the more than 200 entrants storm-bound today in hotels, inns and cottages where they crowded at the windows to watch the pelting rain and the rolling and tossing of the North sea. There was hope, but no promise, of more favorable conditions when play starts at 9:30 o'clock (2:30 a. m., Atlanta time), tomorrow.

Never in recent years has the championship been so wide-open an affair with a dozen Britons, Americans and Argentines conceded to be capable of winning the title, but not a single one of them an outstanding favorite.

Only once in the last 10 years has the British open title failed to go to the United States, but this year the Americans already have played in four big British golfing events and each time the big prize has been seized by a Briton. The Americans have crowded the leader but they have failed to win.

The championship starting tomorrow is the most important of all British golf classics, and the crack American pros here have keyed themselves up to capture the title and so maintain unbroken the record of American victories since 1923 when Arthur Havers, of England, won.

There are six or eight Americans at Carnoustie good enough to win the title Bobby Jones will relinquish. They are Gene Sarazen, Johnny Farrell, MacDonald Smith, Joe Turnesa, Horton Smith, Joe Kirkwood, Tommy Armour, Tony Manero and Willie Hunter.

On the other hand, there are six or eight Britons good enough to win—Archie Compston, Henry Cotton, Percy Alliss, H. C. Jolly and the three brothers, Charles, Ernest and R. A. Whitcombe.

Until today prospects were for a week of fine weather but rain fell all day and the Carnoustie course which is difficult enough under favorable conditions, will require long hitting on the heavy fairways.

The field of 214 will be divided for the 36-hole qualifying round between Carnoustie and the Panmure course at Barry. Carnoustie is 6,701 yards long with par of 72. Panmure is 6,410 yards long, also with par of 72, and is much the easier of the two. After 18 holes of qualifying round play tomorrow, the split field will reverse courses for the final 18 holes Tuesday. The low 100 and ties will qualify for the championship proper beginning Wednesday. Eighteen holes will be played Wednesday and Thursday after which the field will be further cut by the elimination of all those 15 strokes or more behind the leader. The survivors then will play the final 36 holes Friday.

Auto Pilots Protest Ranking in Classic

INDIANAPOLIS, May 31.—(AP)—An official recheck of the records was demanded tonight to determine whether Louie Schnieder, Indianapolis, or Fred Frame, Los Angeles, won the 500-mile race here yesterday.

Harry Hartz, Los Angeles, for whom Frame was driving, made the demand. W. D. Edenburn, Detroit, chief steward of the contest board of the American Automobile Association, said a hearing would be held tomorrow morning.

At the same time officials will hear a protest from Louis Meyer, South Gate, Cal., that he finished third in Myron Steven's car instead of fourth. Ralph Hepburn, of Los Angeles, was flagged in third place yesterday and Edenburn said today's recheck showed no change, with 16 seconds separating the cars at the finish.

Edenburn indicated that although the records have been completely gone over once, another check would be made to make certain that no errors had been made.

Ruth, Cochrane Tie For Lead in Big Six

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

There were two ties yesterday in the standing of the Big Six who compose the leading batters of the major leagues. Babe Ruth made one hit, his ninth homer of the year, in three times up, and Micky Cochrane hit two out of six. They lost two and three points respectively in the averages and went into a tie for the lead with .400 averages.

Buzz Arlett, National league leader, pounded out three hits in five tries for an eight-point gain and tied Al Simmons, third in the American league, who hit only two out of nine and lost 10 points.

Argentina To Send Four Pros to Open

BUENOS AIRES, May 31.—(AP)—The Argentine Golf Association today authorized the professionals, Marcos Churio, Tomas Genta, Jose Jurado and Hector Freccero, to play in the United States open championship. The four Argentines now are in Europe and will compete in the British open starting at Carnoustie, Scotland, tomorrow.

THE SPORTLIGHT

By Grantland Rice

The British Open.

One of the two big shows of golf starts today over the old course at Carnoustie, an ancient battlefield of an ancient game, almost as famous as St. Andrews itself.

There will be more than 200 starters at Carnoustie today, including most of the great ones of golf from all over the world. But against this invasion the British will make a heroic effort to retain the cup that has been crossing the Atlantic year after year.

Since Jock Hutchinson, Scottish-born but entered from the American side, won at St. Andrews in 1921, only Arthur Havers in 1923 has stopped the American charge, in which Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones did most of the damage. Neither of these will be entered at Carnoustie, but the field in general will be one of the strongest that ever battled against Scottish winds.

The British are banking heavily on young Henry Cotton, Archie Compston and the Whitcombes to lead their home defense, with a chance that some other native-born top-notcher will hit his fastest clip.

But the British must face such invading stars as Tommy Armour, Mac Smith, Horton Smith, Gene Sarazen, Johnny Farrell, Joe Turnesa, Tony Manero and Joe Kirkwood. Using the old ball, they have stretched Carnoustie to the limit and it will take a lot of hard hitting to keep in the running.

The Non-Winners.

There are any number of leaders in this big field who have yet to win a British open, and they will be keener than ever to pick up where Jones and Hagen left off. The first to be mentioned in this list is MacDonald Smith, born at Carnoustie, where he swung his first small mashie. A year ago, when the announcement was made that Carnoustie had been selected for the next British open, Mac Smith remarked, "I'll be there if I never take another trip."

Mac Smith is one of the great golfers who has yet to win a national title and at the age of 40 or 41, after 22 years of competition, it would be a dazzling turn to see him break the spell beneath home skies. He has the game to get there, if the memory of too many failures in the past doesn't hit him with too much force at some critical spot.

It was Mac Smith who chased Bobby Jones to the home greens of Hoylake and Interlachen last summer. Now he has another chance, at an age when only a few chances remain.

Tommy Armour, Gene Sarazen and Johnny Farrell have all won the United States open, but have always slipped back in the British test. Now they have another chance to stand with those who have won both titles. This list includes Harry Vardon, Walter Hagen, Bobby Jones, Jim Barnes and Ted Ray. Just five out of the vast golfing army that has tried to storm both citadels for the last 30 years.

These three all have a good chance. They have been playing well and they are keener than ever before to win, with the big competitive gap to be filled in golf through Bobby Jones' abdication, along with other kings.

Sarazen felt that he was about due when he left. He was stroke and stroke with Hagen on his last trip over when one fatal error of judgment cost him a 7 and beat him by a stroke or two as they hit the stretch.

Armour is another transplanted Scot who started his game in the homeland of golf, which happens to be Scotland and not Holland where "kolf," played on ice, is no more like golf than hockey is.

The Carnoustie Program.

The Carnoustie schedule takes in most of the week. There will be an 18-hole qualifying round today and another 18-hole qualifying test tomorrow. There will be something like 150 survivors ready by Tuesday night after the 36-hole total is added up.

After this, Wednesday will be a day of rest and then the surviving field swings into action on Thursday, when the first 18 holes will be played. There will be another 18-hole round on Friday, and once again the field will be cut to the remaining survivors who will battle it out through 36 holes on Saturday.

Who will win? The four with the better chance must include Mac Smith, Tommy Armour, Gene Sarazen and Henry Cotton, with Archie Compston to be given his chance.

Young Cotton is now one of the finest golfers Great Britain has developed in many years. And, like Gene Sarazen, he strides to the first tee full of confidence in his ability to go the route.

The weather, of course, will play a leading role, as it nearly always does in Scottish tests. If there is wind and rain the British have the stronger chance.

Risko Will Fight On Stribling Card

GEAUGA PARK LAKE, May 31.—Johnny Risko will box in the semi-final of the Stribling-Schmeling fight, it was announced here today.

His opponent will be selected later. It may be King Levinsky. It is improbable that it will be Battling Bozo, the Clown. Bozo will appear on the card, however.

Risko will train at Stribling's camp each day, beginning about one week from now. This will add to the draw of the camp, as Risko is very popular with Ohio fight fans.

Baby Stribling and Bobby Hooks, the latter being scheduled to reach here Wednesday or Thursday, may also be given spots on the card.

BOROTRA TAKES FRENCH CROWN

AUTEUIL, France, May 31.—(AP) Jean Borotra, of France, and Cilli Aussem, of Germany, captured the two singles titles of the French hard court tennis championships today.

Borotra defeated his compatriot, Christian Boussus, 2-6, 6-4, 7-5, 6-4 in the finals of the men's singles and Fraulein Aussem, the German champion, upset the highly-favored Betty Nuthall, of England, 8-6, 6-1.

Borotra's triumph over Boussus had been expected, but Miss Nuthall's defeat came as a surprise to the experts. The English girl committed 65 errors, and Fraulein Aussem won with ease.

Heavy showers preceding the women's finals softened the court and handicapped Miss Nuthall in her usual style of play. The German girl shook Betty's confidence at the start, taking the English girl's first service and throughout the first set it was Betty's errors rather than Fraulein Aussem's earned points that won.

In the second set the German champion again won Miss Nuthall's first service and Betty took only the fifth game.

The Borotra-Boussus duel, lacking the tinge of international rivalry, was a dull affair in spots. Boussus fought hard but once Borotra had his game working he was in full command of the situation.

Borotra's victory was the only French triumph of the championships. The women's singles went to Germany for the first time; George Lott and John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia won the men's doubles; Miss Nuthall and Eileen Bennett Whittingstall won the women's doubles, and Miss Nuthall and the South African, P. D. B. Spence, to whom she is rumored engaged, captured the mixed doubles.

Dave Black Defeats Brother in Tourney

Dave Black, Georgia amateur champion, defeated Charles Black, Jr., his brother and city champion, 2 up, Sunday afternoon at Capital City Country Club in the "Battle Royal" tournament. Dave won 2 1-2 points for the Reds.

The Whites are leading in Class A, 12 1-2 to 5 1-2. The Blues are leading the Greens in Class B, and the Black and Tans are even in Class C.

Pete Barnes Sets Sweepstake Pace.

Other titles went to Dr. Hilley in Class B, Jim Smith in Class C, C. L. Gullatt in Class D, J. C. Tally in Class E, J. P. Osborn in Class F and J. B. Scarboro in Class G.

Elsas Wins Ingleside Meet.

Norman Elsas defeated H. J. Haas, 5-3, Sunday morning on the Ingleside Country Club course to win the Director's Handicap tournament. It was the first major tourney of the year for Ingleside players.

Georgia-Alabama Ball Loop Formed

THOMASVILLE, Ga., May 31.—A new baseball league, the Georgia-Alabama, has been formed and will start play Tuesday afternoon. The new organization includes, Blakely, Arlington, Cuthbert, Colquitt and Donalsonville, in Georgia, and Columbia, in Alabama.

JOHNNY VISITS AS W. L. SLUGS SPARRING FOES

Strib Takes Fast Seven Rounds; McGill Likes That Right.

By Ralph McGill,
Staff Correspondent.

STRIBLING'S TRAINING CAMP, GEAUGA LAKE, Ohio, May 31.—Johnny Risko, one of the toughest heavyweights in the game, was a spectator at W. L. Stribling's workout here this afternoon, and went away more convinced than ever that the Georgia boy will be returned a victor over Max Schemling July 3.

Ralph McGill.

Rubbery-Blubbery John Risko has spoken his piece on former occasions, but today found him even more emphatic.

"I wish I was getting a shot at it," he said, "but I missed my chance. I think I could lick Schmeling. When he beat me I forgot all I knew and rushed in to get him and he got across that right. I don't think Stribling can lose this fight. I've said so before and every time I see him work I become more convinced."

SEVEN ROUNDS.

W. L. boxed six rounds and skipped rope through one for a total of seven rounds. One new sparring partner appeared on the program today, Sunny Jim Williams, former protege of the late Walk Miller, worked first today as on Saturday.

He was followed by Sammy Ward, another colored light-heavyweight from Cleveland. Ward is a clever boxer, as is Williams. Both gave W. L. a good workout.

Gene Stanton, who worked on Saturday, was also on the list today, appearing last. He is a stable mate of Johnny Risko and a good heavyweight.

Stribling was using his right more today. On Saturday he stuck almost exclusively to his left, varying with an occasional right cross. Today he was scoring with a right hook. He rocked Ward with it and landed three good ones on Stanton. He also used that wicked left jab, so effective on Saturday, to punish Stanton.

Another excellent crowd of about 500 watched the workout. Ohio turned out a cold rainy Sunday. It was overcoat weather in the morning and a rain kept the crowd away as it did on Saturday. The sun came out, however, about 2 o'clock. The crowd came quickly with the sun. Shortly after the workout the sun went out again and the cold came back.

The Stribling camp is more popular than the one which the champion is maintaining. It costs a half dollar to watch Stribling's workouts. Joe Jacobs kicked the price up to one dollar on Saturday and Sunday and the fight fans who journeyed over were saying harsh things about Joe.

W. L. was seconded in his workout today by Gene Lutz. It was Gene Lutz, now running a string of horses at Bainbridge here, who taught Pa Stribling how to box years and years ago. Lutz used to manage Stribling himself and before that was a fighter, OLD HAND.

He has been in the sporting end of the game all his life and next to the turf game he has followed boxing. He, too, thinks that W. L. will win from the Dutchman and by a knockout.

"The Dutchman hasn't beaten anybody worth mentioning but Johnny Risko," said Lutz. "And Risko didn't train for the fight. He was in no shape, and then he won every round until the ninth when he lost his head and ran into a punch. Risko weighed more than 200 pounds. Schmeling wouldn't have knocked him out then if Johnny hadn't run into it."

Gene Lutz brought over some horse liniment from his stables today and gave W. L. a rubdown following the workout. The liniment is good for man or beast and is guaranteed to keep the muscles loose, said Lutz.

Pa Stribling was satisfied with today's workout even more than with the one of Saturday. It was said that the first two were slow. The next two found W. L. warming up and when he hit Stanton he really looked great.

The Ohio Rainbow division members will hold a convention in Cleveland Saturday night and W. L. will be the guest of honor.

Some time this week W. L. will go on the air over Station WTAM.

There is a constant stream of invitations pouring in by mail and telephone. The Striblings are very popular here.

W. L. will not have another public workout until about Wednesday. He will work in private Monday and Tuesday. His night work will not begin until next week.

Fully a half hour after the workout today the building housing the Georgian was surrounded by a swarm of curious men, women and children. They peered in windows and stood around waiting for Stribling to appear.

There isn't much doubt but that the stadium, seating 110,000, will be filled on the evening of July 3.

St. John's Selected For Lacrosse Play

BALTIMORE, May 31.—(AP)—The lacrosse team of St. John's College, of Annapolis, for the third straight year intercollegiate champion, today was selected to represent the United States in the international series against Canada.

The international series will be played here on June 13 and 15, two games, the total goals to decide the winner.

Garden Heads Happy As Strib, Max Draw

GEAUGA LAKE, Ohio, May 31.—Madison Square Garden officials, who are promoting the Stribling-Schmeling world's championship fight at Cleveland July 3 said today that they are confident of a half-million dollar gate and expect it to go well above that.

Danny Dunn, the promoter, said today that official figures could not be given out on the advance reservations but they are unofficially set at about $200,000.

All this was in before a ticket went on sale. The pasteboards will be put on the line Monday morning. Danny Dunn, with an ear to the ground all these weeks, places the day's sale at not less than $50,000, which will be near a record for the first day's sale.

The fight is catching on even more than promoters had hoped for.

MAT FANS SPLIT IN FORECASTING FOR NEXT BOUT

Leavitt, Daviscourt Each Have Supporters for Wednesday Clash.

As the time grows near for Promoter Henry Weber's next mat card, featuring a two-hour limit main bout Wednesday at Spiller's, between Soldier Leavitt, 310-pound beauty, who has made mincemeat of Tom Marvin, Rex Smith and Marshall Blackstock here, and Dick Daviscourt, the tough hombre from California, discussion is proceeding at a rapid rate among Atlanta' wrestling colony as to what chance Daviscourt has of stopping the winning streak which the roly-poly Leavitt has compiled in local arenas.

Two schools of thought are about equally divided as to the result, one holding that the Soldier, with his elephantine weight and strength, will crush Dick as he has the lesser lights, and another that Daviscourt will call upon the craft which years of experience have taught him to stay away from Leavitt until the big boy has tired, and then go in and finish him.

John Paxos, the comely Greek, who, in view of his satisfactory explanation to the commission for a recent failure to appear here, has been reinstated, is to tackle Nazzarino Poggi, the Italian star, in the one-hour limit semi-windup. This match promises to result in an interesting scientific duel with a minimum of rough stuff.

Tickets are on sale at the Candler building soda fountain and at the Piedmont Hatters. Ladies will be admitted for $1 to any seat in the ball park, Weber has announced.

By Bill Key,
Radio Reporter.

THE PREMIERE performance of the new six-day-a-week Camel quarter-hour series featuring Morton Downey, Anthony "Tony" Wons, and Jacques Renard and his orchestra will be broadcast over the Columbia network and WGST beginning at 9:30 o'clock tonight.

One of the unusual aspects of the program will be the gathering together on a single 15-minute broadcast of three outstanding entertainers who heretofore have been featured individually on the Columbia network.

Downey's recitals with Paramount-Publix programs have made him extremely popular. Wons, although not a newcomer to the radio, rose to new heights during the past year with his daily broadcasts of "Tony's Scrap Book." Renard and his orchestra for nine years have been favorites with New England radio audiences. Only recently, however, has their music been routed over the nationwide Columbia network.

The gala premiere performance will include the introduction by Morton Downey of his new theme song, "Carolina Moon," which supplants "Wabash Moon"; a few minutes with Wons in addition to his routine as master of ceremonies; selections by the new Camel orchestra and three songs by Downey.

Opera will be broadcast from across the Atlantic over the Columbia network a second time, when Rosa Ponselle, American-born prima donna, will be heard from 1 to 1:45 p. m., today in "La Forza del Destino," by Verdi. The performance will be on the stage of the Royal Opera house, Covent Garden, London, from which portions of "Magic Flute" were broadcast in America, May 13.

Since her Covent Garden debut in 1929, Miss Ponselle has been one of the outstanding attractions of the London opera season, and has appeared there three years in succession. In "La Forza del Destino" she takes the part of Leonora, in which she made her operatic debut opposite Caruso in 1918.

THE COMEDY SONG, "Around the Corner and Under the Tree," will be harmonized by the Three Bakers trio, composed of Frank Luther, Phil Dewey and Jack Parker, during the broadcast of the Three Bakers program over the Columbia network at 7 o'clock tonight.

Brad Browne, popular radio personality, will contribute his share of mirth and songs to the program for which Billy Artzt's orchestra will provide the latest in dance music.

The program:
"Bolero."
"If He Really Loves Me."
"Lola."
"Southern Roses."
"Farewell Blues."
"Around the Corner."
"Alice Blue."
"Egyptian Ella."

SUSPECTS FREED IN GORDY SLAYING

Three negroes were brought to the police station Sunday afternoon for questioning in connection with the murder of E. L. Gordy. They were released later in the evening, and more were being sought by detectives.

Funeral services will be conducted at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the chapel of Harry G. Poole & Company, the Rev. M. A. Cooper officiating. Interment will be in Columbus, Ga., where the body will be sent at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning. Thomasville Hears Program From Japan

THOMASVILLE, Ga., May 31. The voice of General W. Cameron Forbes, who owns an estate just outside the city limits of Thomasville, was heard speaking from faraway Japan by local people who turned on the radio about 7 o'clock Saturday morning.

General Forbes, now United States ambassador to Japan, was taking part in a Decoration Day celebration in the orient. After he and the Japanese premier had each made a talk, a Japanese band played the "Star-Spangled Banner" and "My Old Kentucky Home," and then an orchestra in San Francisco played the Japanese national anthem and another Japanese musical number.

"LAWYER'S SECRET" SHOWN AT GEORGIA

Over this country for many years various superstructures of mass thinking have been debating the virtue of a code of ethics. Absence of ethical conduct in some of the older professions has furnished the papers with a number of first-class yarns.

It is with no disposition to enter the argument that the controversy is recalled by the showing, this week, of "The Lawyer's Secret" at Keith's Georgia theater. It is, however, the purpose here to say that the picture, with a cast of stars, provides a strong argument for those who maintain that a uniform code of ethics should be blanketed over professions and trades.

Courts have long since held that communications between priest and penitent, lawyer and client are privileged—and the law does not insist upon the disclosure for any purpose. Such a theme goes a long way toward making "The Lawyer's Secret" a first-rate piece of screen entertainment.

Clive Brook, as the lawyer, performs much better than most screen lawyers. Buddy Rogers, crowded by circumstances into a villainous role, emerges with a prison sentence on the altar of ethics. Richard Arlen, Fay Wray, Jean Arthur and Francisco McDonald are in the cast of stars.

Al K. Hall, another, tops the stage offering. His appearance with "junior" in a skit by the beach provokes loud guffaws. Also on the bill are the Wilton sisters, Marshall Montgomery and Falls, Reading and Boyce.

The Atlanta Cotton Style Show, a mixture of the groaning king's latest creations and local pulchritude, is certainly attractive enough to help the old fellow back on his throne.

—R. E. POWELL.

M'LAGLEN, LOWE PLEASING AT FOX

"Sez you! Sez me!—Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe, stars of the "Cock-Eyed World," are seen and heard in their newest and funniest comedy, "Women of All Nations," showing this week at the Fox theater. This feature is even funnier than any previous pictures with these two comedians and is a continuation of "Flagg" and "Quirt" in their fight over women.

Greta Nissen, beautiful blonde, is discovered by these two hard-boiled marines while in far-away Sweden as an entertainer in a cabaret, with one of the biggest Swedes as her sweetheart. Next they meet her as the favorite in the harem of a wealthy Mussulman on the shore of the Mediterranean. And, of course, in they go—and how they leave is nobody's business.

El Brendel is also seen in "Women of All Nations." He portrays the part of the Swedish marine and adds much to the entertainment of the picture. Fifi O'Orsey, Joyce Compton, Marjorie White and other beautiful ladies furnish the trouble and pleasure for these well-known leathernecks. Jessie De Vorska portrays the part of the Jewish marine who dies during the Managua earthquake.

On the stage, Fanchon and Marco offer "The Dance Idea," with a new bunch of Sunkist Beauties—more beautiful than ever. Everett Sanderson, vaudeville's most versatile performer, depicts various characters, offers many numbers on as many different instruments which are highly pleasing. His tricks with a rope are also good. Others on the program are: Patsy Boland, the crooning comedian; Dave Robel, the human top; Lee Murray, the "half a pint of lightnin'," and Arnold Grazer, the Silver Gladiator.

Enrico Leide's offering, "King Cotton," pays tribute to cotton, in commemoration of National Cotton Week, and received a big ovation. Al Evans at the Fox organ, a newsreel, a cartoon comedy and other short subjects complete a highly entertaining program at Carter Barron's playhouse.

'RED' DEMONSTRATIONS REPORTED IN ECUADOR

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, May 31.—(AP)—Communist demonstrations against the government in the town of Milagro, in the center of the rice and sugar zone, were reported today by newspapers here.

A group of communists was said to have paraded through the town shouting "Down with the government." Rural police were sent to the scene as a precaution.

Burman Asks Repeal Of 'Ford Only' Statute

Atlanta's government has been violating the law it made for a dozen years and has expended approximately $500,000 illegally, it was learned Sunday.

About 1919 an ordinance was passed in the borough council making it illegal to purchase any automobile for service in the borough government except a Ford.

As time went on the old law was forgotten and cars of other makes crept into the government. The fire department bought expensive equipment, hospitals and police departments purchased ambulances and patrol wagons which were not Fords and other departments also forgot the statute.

At council's session this afternoon, Councilman Joseph E. Berman, discoverer of the old law, will ask its repeal.

MUSICAL STANDARDS RAISED, WEBER SAYS

Federation Head Tells of Work Done by Organization in Generation.

"The American Federation of Musicians, within the past generation, has raised the standard of music in the United States and Canada, and has raised the standard of living of musicians," said Joseph N. Weber, president of the organization, at the celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of the local federation at the Georgia theater Sunday afternoon. "Technological competition, mechanical invasions have made inroads into the concert halls of America. But this nation is gradually becoming musical-minded, and as it increases in music appreciation, the demand for the soul and temperament of the artist will supplant the demand for the artificial reproduction of his talent," he said.

"Economists are at variance with each other as to the causes of the present worldwide depression," went on Mr. Weber, who is also vice president of the American Federation of Labor, "but they are at one on the paradoxical fact that we have so much that many of us can't get what we need. With warehouses filled with an over-supply of necessities, millions of our people are faced with poverty. And as we continue to produce we continue to add to the burden of over-supply, which in turn throws people out of work, which to complete the vicious circle, in turn makes it impossible for those whose labor brought forth the supply to obtain any of it for their own use. What we need then is regulation, in order to insure to impossibility of a return of such an unnecessary condition as holds today."

Enrico Leide, Atlanta's foremost orchestra leader, directing a group of 60 musicians, brought forth the quality of concert music that has made him so popular in Atlanta, to round out the program. Two selections from Wagner, the Preludes from the first and third acts of "Lohengrin" were done first. Then the overture "Sakuntala," by Goldmark, was played, and a large number of Atlantans, who had apparently come for the music alone, listened, applauded, and left.

Carl Karston, chairman of the anniversary committee, introduced W. H. Shrader, president of the Atlanta Federation of Musicians, who in turn introduced Mr. Weber. Al A. Evans opened the program with an organ prelude, preceded Mr. Shrader with an interlude, and played a finale to close the day.

HIGH COURT TO PASS ON SIX CASES TODAY

Supreme Tribunal Setting Record for Keeping Abreast of Work.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(AP)—Six cases are expected to be decided by the supreme court before adjournment tomorrow to set a record in keeping abreast of its docket.

Other cases are pending but they were not presented in time for the review and argument necessary for decision. The court, after the brief opinion session tomorrow, will recess until next October 5.

The work of accelerating supreme court procedure was begun by the late Chief Justice Taft. A believer in eliminating delay in handling cases, he carried his ideas into effect after congress had passed the necessary legislation. Before that time it was often more than a year after a case was filed before the court could pass upon it.

The work done by Taft will especially be noted tomorrow, as will that of the late Associate Justice Edward Terry Sanford. The court will pause for a brief service in commemoration of the departed colleagues. An address of eulogy for the two men will be delivered by Attorney General Mitchell.

BISHOP CANNON AGAIN HITS PROBE

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(AP)—Bishop James Cannon Jr., today challenged on three points the right of the senate campaign funds committee to investigate his use of anti-Smith funds in 1928.

In a letter to Chairman Nye, of the committee, Bishop Cannon denied his campaign organization had taken part in congressional elections. He said the committee had no authority to investigate charges of crime and asserted the corrupt practices act, which he has been charged with violating, is unconstitutional.

Bishop Cannon, in his letter today, contended the investigating resolution authorizing creation of the committee had only authorized it to investigate senatorial elections. He added the sole purpose of his 1928 organization had been to defeat the democratic presidential candidate, former Governor Alfred E. Smith.

Gunshot Fatal.

MIAMI, Fla., May 31.—(AP)—E. R. Johnson, 27, died in a hospital here early today from gunshot wounds police said he received in a fight near a barbecue stand May 16. J. A. Murray, owner of the stand, was arrested shortly after the fight and held pending the outcome of Johnson's injuries.

Water Battle Blamed In College Boy's Death

COLLEGE PARK, Md., May. 31.—(AP)—A water battle between room mates was blamed today by authorities of the University of Maryland for the death of Alfred Bernheim, freshman at the college, who fell from the roof of the college dormitory last night.

Bernheim, his room mate, Richard Knight, and another student were throwing water at each other in their fourth floor dormitory quarters, officials said. Bernheim left the room to replenish his supply of water and returned to find the door locked. He climbed to the roof and down through a window. He repeated the attempt, slipped and fell to the court yard below.

JURY TO GET CASE OF ASHEVILLE BANKERS

ASHEVILLE, N. C., May 31.—(AP)—Finis to the first chapter of legal developments growing out of Asheville's bank failures last fall is expected to be written tomorrow when a jury will decide the fates of Newton M. Anderson, Wallace B. Davis and L. L. Jenkins.

The trio, former county and bank officials, are charged with conspiracy to pervert the credit of Buncombe county to aid the Central Bank & Trust Company for almost two years before it failed, and with misapplication of the proceeds of an $875,000 county note issue.

ALFONSO, CONSORT IN ANNIVERSARY

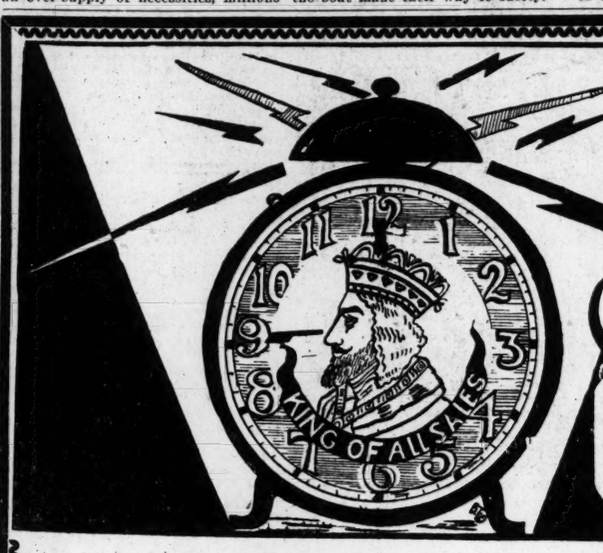

FONTAINEBLEU, France, May 31.—(AP)—Former King Alfonso and Queen Victoria, of Spain, who were married 25 years ago amid the cheers of their subjects in Madrid, today marked their silver anniversary quietly in their exile home in Fontainebleu.

Citizens of the town presented the former king and queen with a vase of roses of red and yellow, the royalists colors. It bore the inscription "To their majesties, the king and queen of Spain."

With the gift they also received a valuable book, printed in Paris in 1625, containing lessons on horsemanship by De Pluvinel. It formerly belonged to King Louis XIII, of France.

INTEREST IN BIBLE WANES, HOLMES SAYS

The Rev. B. R. Holmes, president of the Holmes Institute, said in his talk before Rush Memorial Congregational church, that the reason that attendance at the church has fallen off is because the interest in the Bible is waning, due to the cessation of the practice of teaching it in the public schools and colleges. The Rev. Peacock, pastor of the church, said that the best method of checking crime was by reaching the masses of colored people through the churches and teaching them to prevent, rather than commit violations of the law.

AGNES SCOTT HOLDS CLASS DAY EXERCISES TODAY

Event To Feature Program Of College Commencement

Class day exercises, to be held this afternoon, will be one of the most interesting events of the commencement program at Agnes Scott College. Preceding the seniors, the sophomore class bears the traditional daisy chain and makes a lovely setting for the exercises. The will, prophecy, poem, and history of the senior class will be read, after which the traditional ceremony of planting the ivy will be performed. Parting gifts will be presented to the mascot, little Miss Helene Hayes, and to the faculty advisors, Miss Annie May Christie and Miss Louise Hale. Miss Martha North Watson, president of the senior class, will preside over the occasion.

Today, members of the classes of 1893, 1894, 1910, 1911, 1912 and 1913 will hold class luncheons in the Alumnae house. An interesting feature of these luncheons will be the making of moving pictures of those guests present. Members of the classes of 1929 and 1930 will have a glorious reunion at a dinner this evening in the Alumnae house. STYLES BY ANNETTE

BECOMING BLOUSE—SLIMMING QUALITIES.

Blouses of all kinds and descriptions are favored in Paris just now.

But the one most favored is today's model.

It has the new stitched down diagonal closing with modish butttons, a trimness altogether swagger and slenderizing.

And never was a cape collar more becoming extending in crossover rever effect another slimming quality.

A fitted yoke secures that important flat slimness through the hips.

It's a type that adapts itself to almost any of the new season's fabrics.

It is pictured in opal yellow plaided shantung so charming for sports.

Style No. 381 is designed for sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. It seems incredible but it can be copied exactly with 1 3-4 yards of 39-inch material for the 36-inch size.

Linen cotton mesh, pastel flat washable crepe silk, men's shirting silk, lace, tucked net, printed or plain batiste, dotted swiss and eyelet batiste are very smart.

Our large Fashion Magazine shows the latest Paris styles for adults and children. Also modern embroidery and instructive lessons in sewing.

Price of book, 10 cents.

Price of pattern, 15 cents in stamps or coin. Wrap coin carefully.

TALKING IT OVER

BY CAROLINE CHATFIELD

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

Can you tell a perplexed girl how to attract the men? I am fairly decent looking and older people consider me very attractive, but the young men pass me by. I am a good girl and have high ideals. Is there anything that I can do to change matters?

PERPLEXED.

ANSWER:

Turn your attention to something that you can accomplish more easily and perfect yourself in it. Nothing inspires confidence like success or blasts it like failure. After reading my morning's mail I come to conclude that all the girls and women are worrying over some phase of this eternal man and woman problem. The explanation is simple, however, once you give it thought. The problems are too delicate for the sympathy of acquaintances, they are too intimate to discuss with family and friends, so the people who are wrestling with them resort to an unknown columnist from whom their identity is concealed and from whom they expect to get advice that their own sick minds cannot suggest.

You know perfectly well that a leopard cannot change his spots. Nor can a girl who lacks the native "come hither" cultivate it. She has it, or she hasn't. If yellow isn't becoming the woman must choose another color that looks well on her. If a woman wants to be a musician but has not sense of rhythm and no musical sense she must choose another profession and enjoy the music that others make. If a woman wants to draw and has no native sense of proportion and no eye for line or color, she must give up the ambition for one that she can support. Nobody enjoys being thwarted in an ambition and particularly when the seat of it is the heart.

These women who haven't the capacity, or the native equipment, or the inborn ability to attract the men, can ruin their lives by sitting at home and fretting about it but there is a much better way.

All of romance is not bound up in the relationship between men and women. There is romance in all the departments of life. There is romance in the professions. There is romance in business. There is romance in the arts. There is romance in agriculture. It is there; but it remains for the individual to mine it, to dig it out, to appropriate it.

I know a very superior woman of some forty years who frankly says that she escaped a life of bitterness and cynicism by a slight margin. Early in her youth she felt as you feel—very much discouraged that no man was ever attracted to her. She felt humiliated that the other members of her family had a happy faculty that she had lacked: the ability to make themselves desirable to the opposite sex. After a few years of disconsolate thinking about the matter she says she resolved that she would not let one disappointment wreck her whole life and render her a cynic. She resolved that she would not allow herself to be a defeated creature because she had failed in one ambition. So she set about to fill her life with other interests and she has done it successfully. She has furnished her mind with riches, and she has made herself invaluable to her employer. She is the adored aunt of a number of neices and nephews and she is a useful woman in her community.

Do you ever hear children at play that one of them doesn't say "If you don't do this or that I'm going home. I won't play any more?" It is only the whim of a child, we say. Sometimes she goes home in a huff but sometimes she comes to a better mind after she is persuaded that her bluff won't work. Some of us thwarted grownups do the same thing. If we don't get what we want out of life we crawl into our shells and refuse to come out to play. There we stay until we are sour and sullen and unfit to be pleasant companions to those who follow us in to see what the trouble is. It is a poor way to do.

Every child who has played drop-the-handkerchief knows the awful feeling of not being chosen. To stand in the ring and watch the other girls, who are no better looking and no more attractive, run themselves to death around the ring while you put your weight first on one foot and then on the other and make a crick in your neck looking around to see if the heartless boy has, perchance, recognized you, is a bitter experience. But drop the handkerchief is not the only game in the catalog of games. There are some others that do not hinge on preference. There are some games in which brains count and some games in which skill counts, and some games in which learning counts and some games in which character counts.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

FLIP IS REMINDED OF OLD MR. TOAD AGAIN.

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Having made the acquaintance of Horny the Horned Lizard who, much to his disgust, is better known as Horned Toad, Flip the Terrier visited him often. He had seen him go to bed in the late afternoon by burying himself in the warm sand and early the next morning he ran over to see if Horny was up yet. Much to his disappointment he couldn't find his odd little friend. That was because after Flip had left the afternoon before, Horny had buried himself completely and had not yet come out.

Later in the day, despite the heat, Flip ventured over to that handy place again and there was Horny basking in the sun. "Where were you early this morning?" inquired Flip in his most polite manner.

"Did you say early in the morning?" inquired Horny.

"Yes," replied Flip. "I was over here while it was still cool and comfortable. Phew, but it is hot now! I don't see how you stand it."

"Stand it!" exclaimed Horny. "Why, it is just right now. It can't be too hot to suit me. If you were here while it was still cool this morning you didn't see me for the very good reason that I was still in bed. You don't get me out until it is nice and warm. The hotter it is and the dryer it is the better suited I am. While it is cool I stay in the ground."

"That is where you differ from my friend Old Mr. Toad. He can't stand the hot sun. When the sun is out he digs in and comes out again when it becomes cool," said Flip.

"Well, as I have told you before, I'm no Toad," snapped Horny.

"Sorry," said Flip. "I forgot. You see, there is something about you that reminds me of Old Mr. Toad, although you are really very different. I guess it must be your shape."

Horny did not reply. He began to move forward slowly and carefully and Flip saw that his bright eyes were fastened on something. Then Flip saw an insect just a few inches ahead of Horny. Slowly Horny crept forward. Then his head was stealthily bent forward and suddenly out shot his tongue and the insect disappeared.

There was a gleam of satisfaction in his bright little eyes as he looked up at Flip. "That was good. Did you see me catch him? I wish another would come along," said he.

"Yes, I saw you," replied Flip. "That is just the way Old Mr. Toad catches insects."

"There you go again!" exclaimed Horny. "Haven't I told you that I'm no Toad? I'm a Lizard and proud of it. Why are you always comparing me to a Toad? I'll thank you not to mention Toad again."

"I won't," promised Flip remorsefully. "Of course I know you are not a Toad. But you do remind me of my old friend and it slips out before I think. I've watched some of your long-tailed cousins catch insects and they go at them with a rush. I've never seen one of them catch one with his tongue the way Old—I mean the way you do. That's a handy tongue, isn't it?"

"I'll say it is," replied Horny. "My cousins may rush after their food, but I don't have to and I never could see any use in doing things I don't have to. But don't think I can't move quickly when I want to. Can Old Mr. Toad move like this?"

Horny suddenly darted away with a speed that some of his long, slim cousins might have been proud of. Then, spying another insect, he again made a slow, careful approach and again that tongue flashed out and the insect disappeared.

"Excuse me if I ask a personal question," said Flip. "Is that tongue of yours sticky? I noticed that you seemed to touch that insect with your tongue." "Certainly it is sticky. How else do you think I could hold onto those insects?" replied Horny. "I suppose you'll tell me now that Old Mr. Toad's tongue is sticky too."

"Yes," replied Flip. "Anyway, I've been told that it is."

INSTALLMENT XVIII.

It came back to him at night when he woke up after dreaming of Flammchen. Her hair had the color, the flamelike sheen, of old birchwood, and the lights and shadows of its grain. This hair of hers was clearly before his eyes as he lay in bed at night, while the lights of the electric sign flitted across the drawn curtains. The portfolio on the table in the darkness got on his nerves. The got up and put it in his trunk. His suite annoyed him. It was drear and uncomfortable. The bath tap dripped and the drip, drip, drip pursued him till he fell asleep and again dreamed of the typist and her birchwood hair. He awoke once more. He was in a panic at the thought of the meeting with Schweimann and Gerstenkorn and his heart thumped in his chest. He had been in a strange confusion of mind ever since he handed over the letters from England and he had a persistent feeling that his hands were not clean. Last of all, just as he was falling into a doze, he heard some one come along the carpeted passage, whistling softly. It was the occupant of No. 69.

Kringelein, too, in No. 70, heard it and woke up. He had been dreaming of Grusinskaya. She had come to him in the business office and put before him some unpaid accounts. He was beginning to feel at home, this Otto Kringelein, this bookkeeper from Fredersdorf, this sufferer from claustrophobia, who wanted to seize one hour of crowded life before he died. His hunger was infinite, but he could not stand very much. His weakness of body many a time got the better of him during these days and forced him to retreat from the scenes of dissipation to his bedroom. He had bought himself some medicine—Hundt's Elixir. From time to time he took a sip and hoped for the best. It had a bitter taste of cinnamon, and he gulped it down and even felt the better for it.

He held out his cold fingers in the darkness and began on a calculation. His fingers always went dead while he was asleep, as though they were making a beginning, and this was unpleasant. He seemed to see numerals with bent heads prowling round his room, till at last he raised himself and turned on the light. Unfortunately, this lifelong habit of the impecunious Kringelein would not desert him now he was a man of wealth. He could not help reckoning up figures. Kringelein had a little notebook bound in shiny black cloth, which he had brought with him from Fredersdorf, and he sat at it for hours together. He entered his expenses in it, the reckless expenses of a man who was learning to enjoy life and spending a month's salary in two days. Sometimes he was so dizzy that all the four walls with their wallpaper of tulips seemed to fall in upon him. Sometimes he was happy, not entirely happy nor as he imagined the rich being happy, but all the same, happy. Sometimes, again, he sat on the edge of his bed and thought of his approaching death. He thought of it hard and with horror, while his ears went cold and he blinked in anguish of heart. In spite of all, he could make nothing of it.

There were a good many behind the locked double doors of the sleeping hotel who could not sleep. Dr. Otternschlag, indeed, about this time of the night laid a little hypodermic syringe down on his wash-hand stand and, throwing himself on his bed, floated away on the light clouds of a morphine trance. Witte, the conductor, who had No. 221 in the left wing, could not sleep either. Old people sleep so little. He was sitting at his window, pressing his forehead against the window pane and staring at the blank wall opposite. Fragments of a Beethoven symphony were going through his head. He had never conducted it. He heard Bach—the tremendous "Crucify Him" from the Matthew Passion. I have wasted all my life, thought old Witte, and all the never-sung music of his life made a lump in his throat and he gulped it down. There was the rehearsal for the ballet at eight-thirty in the morning. He would sit at the piano and play the same old march to the convolutions of the ballet, always the same spring waltz and Mazurka and Bacchanal. He ought to have left Elisaveta while there was still time, he thought. Now it was too late. Elisaveta had become an old woman and he could not leave her now. They would have to see it through with her for the few years that remained. . . .

Elisaveta Alexandrovna Grusinskaya could not sleep either. In the depth of night she heard the swift and never-ceasing flight of time. There was a two-fold ticking in the dark room—from a bronze clock on the writing table and from her wrist watch on her bedside table. Each told the flight of seconds, and yet one ticked faster than the other. It made her heart beat to listen to them. She turned on the light and got out of bed, and went to the looking glass. The passage of time met her there—there most of all. It met her too in her press notices, in the shocking rudeness of the newspapers, in the success of the ugly and clumsy dancers that were now in fashion, in the losses on her tours, in the feeble applause, in the vulgar way her manager, Meyerheim, talked—everywhere, everywhere, she saw the passage of time. The years she had danced away were in her tired ankles, in the shortness of breath that came over her after 32 tours of classical dances, and in her blood, too, that now often pulsed in her neck and flushed her cheeks. It was hot in her room, though the French window onto the balcony was wide open. Grusinskaya took her pearls out of the small suitcase, two handfuls of cool pearls, and put her face down to them. In vain. Her eyelids were still hot and still smarted from the paint and the footlights; her thoughts still troubled her and the clock and the watch still raced on. Grusinskaya wore a rubber bandage under her chin, her hands and lips were steeped in ointment. The sight of herself in the looking glass was so hateful that she quickly turned out the light. In the darkness she swallowed a veronal tablet and began to weep the hot tears of a lonely and passionate woman—then the drug took hold of her and at last she fell asleep.

Just outside someone got out of the lift. It might be the young man from Nice. Grusinskaya took him with her into her veronal dream. He was in No. 69 and he was the handsomest man she had ever seen. . . .

The occupant of No. 69 whistled softly on his way to his room, not unpleasantly, and merely because he was happy. He was careful in his room to make no noise and when he was in his pajamas and smart blue leather slippers he was more silent than ever. There was something of the wildcat in this handsome young man. Whenever he passed through the lounge it was as if a window of sunshine were opened in a cold room. He was a marvelous dancer, cool and yet vibrant. There were always flowers in his room. He loved them and their scent. He was quick to follow girls in the street. Sometimes he would merely look at them with pleasure, sometimes he would speak to them, and make their acquaintance. Sometimes, too, he got drunk, but in so amiable and high-spirited a fashion that no one could take it amiss. In the mornings it was not very pleasant to have the room beneath his, for then he went through his physical exercises and soft thuds came at regular intervals through the ceiling. He wore smart bow ties and low-cut waistcoats. His clothes sat as easily on his muscular body as the hide on a pedigree animal. Sometimes he went off in his little four-seater and nothing more was seen of him for a couple of days. He bought laces from street vendors, cigaret lighters that would not light, little birds of India-rubber, and countless boxes of matches. Suddenly a longing for horses would come over him. He got up six, went by bus to Tattersall's and inhaled with delight the scent of sawdust, saddlery, stable manure and sweat. Then if an animal took his fancy he rode in the Tiergarten, breathing his fill of the gray early mist of a March morning among the trees, and returned well satisfied to the hotel. He had been found before now in the kitchen courtyard behind service stairs standing beside a gutter full of slops and refuse and staring up to the top of the five stories where the aerials hung beneath the colorless sky.

There is hardly a need or a want that cannot be filled in Atlanta's stores and factories.

MACHINERY DEALERS REPORT GOOD SEASON

Yancey Brothers, Inc., well-known heavy machinery dealers, 634 Whitehall street, S. W., reports an exceptional season with power-operated machinery.

Their big combine has brought in new crops in sections where it was not considered profitable to attempt them before. Rice and crotalaria in Florida, lespedeza in Tennessee, willow, hemp and flax in other sections.

Transferring the hard work of plowing one row by a man to riding on a big combine, plowing two, four, six and eight rows at a time, or digging, sorting, sacking and loading potatoes, in one operation, is what these larger and greatly improved combine machines will do. These machines derive their name, "combine," from the many kinds of farm harvesting work they can do. The new combine as sold by Yancey Brothers is made by the Caterpillar Tractor Company, of Peoria, Ill., and in the hookup it will do the work of 33 men, when pulled by a big tractor.

Yancey Brothers, Inc., carries a full line of leading farm implements, which have been proved the world over, and are backed by factory guarantees as to durability and utility. They also carry a full line of parts for all the machines they sell. This is very often important in the saving of time, where some accident or breakage might occur.

The company has long been noted for more than just a place to buy the latest in improved machinery and replacement parts. They have an efficient soil expert, who travels much, advising the farmers as to the best crops as to be planted on their kind of soils. They are also consistent advocates of all laws looking for the betterment of agricultural conditions.

Both Goodloe and Earl Yancey are business leaders, and they have an organization of experts in all departments that render the most satisfactory services to all customers of the firm.

NEW INNER SPRING MEETS BIG DEMAND

The growth of the Gate City Mattress Company, 625 Edgewood avenue, is of importance in their line, and in the commercial life of the community.

This firm is having exceptional success with their new inner spring. They do this new style of renovating by placing a light wire coil spring between an equal number of cotton felt layers, made from the old cotton. In this way there is an even amount of cotton on both sides of the flexible resilient springs, and the old mattress is converted into a high-grade one.

In renovating old feather beds, the Gate City is also having good business. They take any kind of an old feather bed, dump the feathers into a large drum and turn the steam on. After a few minutes the feathers are washed clean, and then the steam is turned off. Then the drum is revolved at high speed for another few minutes, and this dries them, so that they are taken out dry and probably cleaner than when first put into the mattress many years ago.

The new way they make up the feather bed, so that the feathers will not crowd from one side or end of the ticking like in the old way, is to sew the top and bottom ticking together about every eight inches, crosswise of the mattress. This makes it look and feel like nine long narrow feather pillows were laid side by side. The other advantage of this arrangement is that the mattress is so easy to handle, as it can be rolled up, or turned over by a small child.

The proprietor of this company, Paul Hornbuckle, says that their samples of bed tickings and coverings are the best they have ever shown, and that these new tickings will be put on the feather as well as the cotton mattresses.

MILLER LUMBER CO. REPORTS ACTIVITY

The Miller Lumber Company, 1001 Fortress avenue, is a very busy place, and is recognized as one of the outstanding firms in this section. The high position they hold in the lumber field has been attained by rendering a most valued and essential service to their customers. They supply lumber not only to contractors and individuals in this community, but they are doing business in towns and cities for many miles around.

They offer a complete line of lumber for all types of lumber construction work. They sell in large or small lots, and every buyer is given the rapid and efficient service, no matter what may be the size of the order.

The owners of the firm buy in large quantities. Their expert knowledge of the various grades and kinds of lumber, enables them to secure the best at the lowest prices, and the customers are given the benefit of the savings.

They carry everything in building materials, including roofing, flooring, weatherboarding, wall boards, roofing cement, glass, fence wire, mouldings, hardware and paints. They have excellent facilities for keeping the stock, and when it is unloaded, it is in perfect condition.

Uncle Sam Tells How To Be Cool On Torrid Days

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(AP)—Four "do's" and a "don't" were laid down today by the public health service as hot weather rules for keeping comfortable.

They were:

Eat less, with plenty of fresh fruit and vegetables and less meat and fried foods on the menu.

Wear clothing light in both texture and color.

Sleep regularly.

Exercise but avoid strenuous exertion.

Don't try to acquire a coat of tan in one day.

On the point of food, the service recommended ice cream highly and advised plenty of milk and fruit juices, with six to eight glasses of cool water daily. A special warning was issued for picnicking city dwellers against tempting-looking springs in which deadly germs might lurk.

Regarding dress, the health service reminded the public that light colors turn the sun's rays, while black absorbs the heat. Clothing light in texture allows better circulation than heavier garments.

Electric fans were indorsed to aid sleep during warm periods, with the caution that the breeze be not turned directly on the body, an easy cause of contracting colds.

Rare Bible Acquired By Duke University

DURHAM, N. C., May 31.—(UP)—The Duke University library announces the acquisition of one of the rarest of all literary treasures, a magnificent manuscript of the entire Greek New Testament in a state of almost perfect preservation, dating from the 12th century.

Such complete manuscripts of the Greek New Testament are extremely rare, there being only 46 known. These are for the most part in the permanent possession of the royal and university libraries of Europe.

While America possesses portions of the New Testament text which are older than this manuscript, this is the first complete text of the New Testament to be brought to an American university or public library. Its acquisition is a valuable addition to the critical apparatus of American biblical scholarship.

ARMY BAND TO GIVE CONCERT SATURDAY

The United States Army band of 100 pieces will give a free open-air concert from 3 until 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon at Piedmont park. It will be the band's first appearance in Atlanta in more than two years.

The band, which will pass through Atlanta late today on its way to Montgomery, will stop here on its return trip to Washington. It has been sent to Montgomery to play for the reunion of the United Confederate Veterans. Arrangements for its concert here were made by Joseph P. Billups, of the Atlanta & West Point railroad, and Major General Frank R. McCoy, the army fourth corps area commander.

The band, which will travel in a special train over the Atlanta & West Point route, will arrive here at 2:30 in the afternoon. It will be met by General McCoy, Acting Mayor G. Everett Millican and other military and civilian officials and transported to the park in motor buses. After the concert the band will be taken back to its train and the journey to Washington continued.

A feature of the concert will be the appearance of Miss Patricia McConnell, soloist, a former member of the Chicago and Philadelphia grand opera companies.

1—Grand March: "Pomp and Circumstance" ..... Elgar
2—Selection from "Siegfried" ..... Wagner (Part III of The Ring.)
This selection contains 10 "motifs," introduced in the same order in which they occur in the opera.
3—Waltz, "Sobre Las Olas" ... Rosas
4—Fantasia from "Pagliacci" ..... Leoncavallo
5—Scena and Aria: "L'Insana Parola" from "Aida" ..... Verdi
Miss Patricia O'Connell, soprano.
This aria will be preceded by the playing of the grand march from "Aida."
6—Overture: "The Year 1812" ..... Tschaikowsky
(This overture depicts Napoleon Bonaparte's ill-fated march upon Moscow in the winter of 1812; and was especially written for the dedication of the Church of the Redeemer, which was intended as an outward glorification of the Battle of Borondino, fought on September 7, 1812. Russia is symbolized by two themes, one a liturgical hymn, "God Save the King," heard in the beginning, and the Russian Hymn. France is symbolized by the "Marseillaise."
"The Star-Spangled Banner."

GOLDEN EAGLE STORES REPORT SALES STRONG

Hugh R. Fischer, of the Golden Eagle Company, reports that they are having remarkable sales in their six stores on garden hose, and another car load is being made ready for them at the manufacturing plant they buy from.

This firm is selling extra heavy rubber hose at 6 1-2 cents a foot. They could not do this, only for the fact that they buy a car load at a time. This hose is all lenghts from ten feet up to as much as a private home owner, dairyman or contractor may need.

This company features automobile accessories, buying in large quantities, and in this way they can sell cheap. Mr. Fischer established a rule many years ago to never buy cheap, unreliable goods but buy the best goods in large quantities, discount all bills, and divide the savings in putting them into lower prices for their customers.

Another thing the company is featuring is Brunswick tires. Brunswick, Mr. Fischer says, represent the best in design, heavy tread and long life.

In opening the new store at 228 Peachtree street, last month, this firm for the first time in their more than 35 years in business, added a fine line of sporting goods, featuring golf and tennis supplies during their first month. The same large buying force was put back of these new sporting supplies.

5TH RESERVE DISTRICT SHOWS MIXED TRENDS

RICHMOND, Va., May 31.—(AP)—Business in the fifth federal reserve district, comprised of South Carolina, North Carolina and several other southern states, showed conflicting tendencies in April and the first half of May, the federal reserve bank for that district reports.

"In some lines of trade developments followed seasonal trends, while in others unseasonal results were noted," the bank commented in its monthly review.

"Business activity in all lines, whether showing seasonal progress or retrogression or not, was on a lower level than in other recent years. . . .

"Deposits in reporting member banks increased between the middle of April and the middle of May, both demand and time deposits increasing, but loans by the same banks decreased, contrary to custom at this time of the year when credit for crop planting is needed. . . ."

NEW GOVERNMENT SEEN FOR SOUTHERN CHINA

SHANGHAI, May 31.—(AP)—Indications that the south China insurrectionists were determined to carry out threats of establishing an independent government at Canton in opposition to the Nanking rule appeared more definite tonight.

Reports from Canton told of greater activity among the rebelling group than at any time since the split first appeared in April. Nanking, however, professed to believe the situation would be settled amicably although it was prepared to resort to force if necessary.

STORAGE COMPANY'S BUSINESS IMPROVES

The Walker Storage & Van Company, 521 Peachtree street, N. E., one of the largest storage companies in the south, reports through their resident manager, George Sebold, that they have had their best business since they opened the Atlanta branch.

This company owns and operates large storage plants for household goods in Louisville, Memphis, New Orleans and other places, besides Atlanta. They feature large steel vaults that will hold three or four rooms of household furniture. Their plan of operation, with these steel boxes, which are nearly as large as the bodies on their vans, is to back up to the door of the family that is to move or have their furniture stored, and put all the most valuable articles in them under the householders' direction. Then when the furniture is packed in, the big steel doors are locked and the householder given the key. This means that those doors are not opened again except at the furniture owner's direction.

This locked steel box method is winning many customers who do not want the worry of wondering what condition their furniture will arrive at some distant point, or be in when they want it a week, month or year later.

They render a complete service in their fireproof storage warehouse. They take that extra care, so necessary in the packing of the rarest of chinas, glassware, antique pottery, valuable draperies, the prized wedding presents and graduation gifts, rare paintings and priceless rugs, inventors' models or experiments.

DEMPSEY FINISHES TOUR OF SCHOOLS

Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, editor and manager of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, published in Atlanta, has just completed a tour of several Georgia towns where he has delivered commencement addresses to the high schools. Filled with the spirit of graduation, he has given over the May 20 issue of the Advocate to messages to, and articles appropriate for, young men and women who will be starting out into the business world within a few weeks.

The featured article has to do with the graduation exercises at Emory University and its ninety-first commencement. It gives short stories about the three speakers at those exercises, Dr. John H. Finley, editor of the New York Times; Judge Virlyn B. Moore, of the class of 1902, and Dr. Umphrey Lee, of Dallas, Texas. Dr. Finley will deliver the baccalaureate address, Judge Moore the alumni oration, and Dr. Lee the commencement sermon.

TARZAN AT THE EARTH'S CORE No. 1

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Tarzan of the Apes paused to listen and to sniff the air. From a great distance faint sounds came to his ears—sounds that no other human ears could have heard. Something strange had come into his African jungle. Silently, the Ape-Man swung into the trees and moved swiftly in the direction of the sounds. For when strangers came, the Lord of the Jungle always investigated. Because man, alone of all creatures, brought change and strife and trouble into the jungle's peace.

Buto the rhinoceros, Tantor the elephant, and Numa the lion came and went through the forest. To them, today, Tarzan paid little attention as each minute narrowed the distance between the Ape-Man and those whom he sought. Now, his keen ears caught the sound of padding, naked feet. To his sensitive nostrils came the spoor of black men mixed with the faint scent which Tarzan knew meant the presence with them of a white man. Above the wide, well marked game trail, the Lord of the Jungle crouched and waited.

Swinging along beneath their heavy burdens and singing as they marched, came into view a column of natives. Near the front marched a single white man. Tarzan's eyes surveyed the handsome youngster, intently, for several minutes. Like many savage beasts and primitive men, Tarzan possessed an uncanny instinct. Almost instantly he could judge aright the character of strangers he encountered. And evidently this stranger met the Ape-Man's whole-hearted approval.

Like a shadow, Tarzan sped through the trees until he was some little distance ahead of the marching safari. Then he dropped down into the trail and awaited its coming. Soon the blacks rounded a curve in the trail and suddenly saw him. Instantly they halted, jabbering excitedly. For these were men recruited in another district and did not know Tarzan of the Apes by sight. "I am Tarzan," announced the Ape-Man. "What do you want in Tarzan's country?"

U. S. To Offer $800,000,000 In Bonds To Public June 15

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(AP)—The first move by the treasury to replace its huge short-term security issues with long-term bonds was announced tonight by Secretary Mellon.

He said an issue of 18-year 3 1-8 per cent bonds totaling $800,000,000 would be sold to the public on June 15.

The bonds will be used to retire $589,000,000 of certificates of indebtedness issued while declining receipts and increasing expenditures created a deficit of more than a billion dollars.

Maturing in 1949 the bonds will be redeemable on and after June 15, 1946.

Retirement of the certificates will reduce the short-term debt to approximately $2,900,000,000.

Since the falling of income taxes indicated that the government would finish the fiscal year with a huge deficit for the first time since 1920, the treasury has issued securities totaling more than $2,600,000,000 in less than three months. About half of the amount was to refund outstanding securities and the remainder to meet the needs of the government and to finance veterans' loans.

The treasury issued on March 15 a total of $1,500,000,000 in bonds and certificates and used $1,109,000,000 to retire maturing treasury notes. Since then it has issued certificates and bills in amounts ranging from $50,000,000 to $270,000,000.

In addition to the certificates falling due on June 15, the treasury must pay about $90,000,000 interest on the public debt. On the other side of the ledger, however, it will receive about $170,000,000 in payments from foreign governments on war debts and interest. Also it will collect the second installment of tax on 1930 income but if the $300,000,000 decrease registered in the first payment in March is reflected in June revenues the total will not amount to more than $300,000,000.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON FORCED TO NEW LOWS

NEW ORLEANS, May 31.—(AP)—Cotton prices made new low levels for the season during the past week in fairly active trading. The course of prices was persistently downward until the low levels of the week and season were reached in Thursday's trading, after which there was a moderate recovery, due mainly to satisfied shorts covering in advance of the Memorial Day holiday when New York and many southern markets were closed while Liverpool was still observing the last of the Whitsuntide holidays.

The decline was largely due to the weakness in the stock market which was accepted as indicative of unfavorable general trade and industrial conditions. An improvement in the weather inland helped the decline to some extent. While there was some trade buying on the scale down and some price fixing as well, the principal support to the market came from satisfied shorts covering and taking profits.

The most encouraging feature of the week was the considerably larger exports than for the corresponding week last year. The total clearances reached 80,193 bales as compared with 19,318 for the corresponding week last year.

The following shows the high, low and closing sales in the New Orleans futures market during the past week compared with a year ago:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Last Year.
July	8.91	8.45	8.67	15.85
Oct.	9.25	8.77	9.00	14.80
Dec.	9.45	8.99	9.20	14.88
Jan.	9.54	9.16	9.32	14.88
Mar.	9.70	9.30	9.55	15.02

BOSTON, May 31.—(AP)—Ada Wright, mother of two of nine negro youths under sentence of death in Alabama for allegedly attacking two white girls, took the stand at a protest meeting tonight and pleaded for the lives of the boys to whom she said she had been both "mother and father." Her young daughter, Lucille, also stood before the gathering and called for action to save her two brothers.

Pigeon Flies 216 Miles In 6 Hours, 35 Minutes

Speeding through the air at the rate of 964.66 yards per minute against adverse weather conditions, a homing pigeon belonging to the Westover Lofts won the Valdosta-Atlanta race for yearlings in the Atlanta Homing Pigeon Club's contest Sunday. A. E. Kirk, agent for the club in Valdosta, which is 216 miles from here "as the pigeon flies," released 69 picked pigeons at 7 o'clock Sunday morning, and 6 hours and 35 minutes later the first pigeon came home.

The other lofts registered times as follows: Stoddard, 964.34 yards per minute; Capitol View, 961.20; Tucker, 944.44; Hardy, 932.44; Murphy, 918.72; Crawford, 916.43; Cole, 884.60. Thursday night the club will send about 125 birds to Fort Myers, Fla., to be released at sunrise Saturday for the 500-mile flight to Atlanta. It is hoped that a record may be established, or that at least one bird will be clocked at its loft before sundown the same day. This race will be in the unlimited class, both as to ages and as to the number of entries. The winner will be awarded a cup, as this is the most important race of the club's season.

NEW YORK, May 31.—(AP)—The bond market went through a series gyrations last week which reached their conclusion in a number of new low prices in various groups in the last two days of that period.

The preference of investors for high grade issues continued and some of this group even gained moderately. The late losses in the more speculative bonds no doubt were caused to some extent by the weakness in stocks on Friday and possibly the week-end holiday induced some selling by timid holders.

A pungent comment on present bond market conditions is printed in the current review of business of the National City bank.

It says:

"Unquestionably there has been a good deal of hysteria in connection with the bond market and there is evidence that a good many investors are sacrificing their securities needlessly, with results which are unfortunate not only to bondholders themselves but to business which is dependent upon the bond market as an aid to recovery."

The effect of the holiday was apparent also in the new securities offered. The bulk of the issues publicly offered were floated on the first four days of the week.

The aggregate of such flotations was $108,279,000 compared with $93,235,000 for the previous week. The former is the largest weekly total since the week of April 10, when $296,275,000 in securities were offered, including a $100,000,000 issue for the Pennsylvania Power & Light Co., $30,000,000 debentures for the Fox Film Corporation and $30,000,000 in bonds of New York state.

Since the Federal Reserve Bank of New York reduced its rediscount rate on May 8 to the lowest level on record at 1 1-2 per cent, which was followed by reductions in other federal reserve banks, the bond market has experienced further selective buying, concentrated in the high-grade issues.

One of the principal purposes of the lower rediscount rates in New York was to stimulate the bond market by making interest rates so low as to discourage people from keeping idle funds on deposit in banks and to divert them to the bond market. Such an effect has not been accomplished yet at least so far as the great bulk of good, but not high grade, bonds are concerned.

However, economic cycles often take time to get started and it may well be that the present condition is no exception to that rule.

BRADSTREET'S WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

Bank clearings last week at leading cities in the United States, as reported to Bradstreet's, dropped sharply from the previous week, and also from the like week of last year. The cities outside of New York suffered as well as did the metropolis, reflecting the depressed conditions throughout the country.

The total clearings for the week ending Thursday, May 28, aggregated $7,856,274,000, showing a decrease of 13.1 per cent from the previous week, and of 17.1 per cent from the same week a year ago. Outside of New York the total was $2,626,818,000, a decline of 10.5 per cent from week before last, and of 19.3 per cent from a year ago.

The decrease at New York from last year was 16 per cent, Chicago 16.1 per cent, Philadelphia 15.4 per cent, Boston 18.5 per cent, San Francisco 17.2 per cent, Pittsburgh 25.3 per cent, Detroit 20 per cent, Cleveland 27.1 per cent, Kansas City 23.5 per cent, Atlanta 13.9 per cent, and St. Louis 26.7 per cent. Two cities reported gains last week over a year ago, Jacksonville 19.4 per cent and Norfolk 1.3 per cent.

FOX FILM EARNS $9,469,000 IN 1930

NEW YORK, May 31.—(AP)—Delayed by differences over auditing policies, the 1930 annual report of the $200,000,000 Fox Film Corporation, made public today, shows its net income available for dividends amounted to $9,469,000.

This was equal to $3.64 a share on 2,525,660 shares of A and B stock outstanding at the close of the year. The 1929 earnings were equal to $10.28 a share on a much smaller capitalization. During 1930, 1,600,000 new shares were issued.

The publication of the report has been delayed for several weeks by differences between the accountants employed by the management and accountants employed by the banking group which underwrote new financing for the company in April. The above figures are based upon the audit made by the regular auditors for the company. The report also explains, however, that a different method of amortizing sound film used by the accountants for the bankers would have resulted in an additional write-off of $894,261, and consequent reduction of net profit.

CURB TURNS FIRMER AS PRESSURE LIFTS

BY JOHN L. COOLEY.
Associated Press Financial Writer.

NEW YORK, May 31.—(AP)—New lows for the bear market were recorded by most of the active curb stocks in last week's trading. Volume of selling was relatively small, however, and a firmer tone developed when pressure was lifted.

With many of the junior market's stocks already quoted at deflated levels, attention was directed toward higher priced issues. Prominent in this group was Aluminum of America which dropped to well under $100 a share. At the height of the late winter recovery this issue reached $224, but its descent from this peak has proceeded without important interruption. Not since 1927 have the shares sold below 100. The company's gross income in 1930 was 45 per cent lower than in 1929. During the depression the properties have been extended and improved.

Utilities reacted slowly. Electric power production is running considerably under a year ago and this group has met increasing selling for both accounts, while the technical rallies have mostly served to bring out additional offerings. Many holding company shares are quoted at not much more than half of their 1931 highs.

Oils were still heavy. Cities Service common went through the week with only minor declines, but the preferred was soft. Mining stocks reflected the depressed metal prices. Amusements were dull. Inactive specialties traded at substantial concessions for the most part, in indication of the market's thinness.

Investment trusts dragged downward. The decline was particularly sharp in United Founders, which lost a point. This holding company's semi-annual report covering the half-year ended May 31 will probably not be available for at least a month, but it is believed that its shares, as well as those of other corporations of similar type, are selling at a discount from current break-up value. Such, at least, has been the experience of trust issues during the bear market.

COTTON GOODS SALES, PRICES SHOW DECLINE

NEW YORK, May 31.—The market has not been able to resist a continued weak stock movement and lower prices for cotton. Print cloth prices have been lowered and sheeting prices have become unsettled. The volume of business has shown some falling off on account of this unsettlement, but would improve again at once if prices began to show some resistance. Goods are wanted, but buyers are satisfied in having relayed purchases to the last minute and will probably continue this policy until they see signs of change ahead.

Irrespective of the nearby situation, we are confident that we have now reached a point in this long decline at which we are bound to have a very large distribution of cotton goods during the next year or so, a larger and wider distribution than we have seen for some time, even in spite of worldwide confusion, for there is a price at which necessities will sell in spite of everything. When such a demand is likely to make itself felt, we do not pretend to know, but we do feel certain that it is on the cards.

It looks as if our sales for the month of May would show about 23 per cent better than for April and about 19 per cent better than for May, 1930. For the first five months of this year our total sales are 12 per cent in excess of production.

For the month of April the Federal Reserve Bank of New York reports that in this district total department store sales showed a decrease of 7.9 per cent from April, 1930, and a decrease of 5.9 per cent for the first four months, while stocks in general at end of month showed a decrease of 14.01 per cent. Sales of cotton goods for the month showed a decrease of 10.7 per cent as compared with a year ago, while stocks showed a decrease of 10.5 per cent.

Restore confidence, and business in cotton goods will pick up promptly.—Hunter & Company.

A bondholders' protective committee has been formed as a result of the May 1 interest default on the 10-year 6 per cent gold bonds of Federal Sugar Refining Company, deposit of the securities with Chase National Bank of New York is requested by the committee.

BUSINESS FACES SUMMER QUIET

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

NEW YORK, May 31.—(AP)—Business now faces the summer recession of activity.

If it faces June and July with scant courage, it is because the spring season has failed to bring as vigorous a revival as the more hopeful had expected.

None the less, several of the more commonly accepted statistical indices of general business activity show that in view of the low level of trade at the beginning of the year, the expansion experienced has been larger than can be attributed wholly to the stimulus of changing seasons.

Recession of basic activity has been notable during May, particularly in the steel industry, but from as much of the record as is now available for the month, it is doubtful if May has shown as much slackening as it normally does. Automobile manufacturing is believed to have approximated April's output, and textile and shoe manufacturing have been well maintained.

Slump Checked.

Encouraging is the partial checking of the slump in building activity, so apparent in April. Figures on building contracts let show that the third week of May experienced some expansion over the first two weeks. The total for the first three weeks indicates a decline from April of 6 7-10 per cent, only moderately larger than the usual decline from April to May.

Retail trade during the past week was stimulated by preparations for the Memorial Day week-end, and weather conducive to the movement of seasonal merchandise. Most reports on the movement of goods at retail indicate a recession in the dollar volume substantially less than the shrinkage in prices during the past 12 months, so that a larger actual volume of goods appears to be moving in many lines. Profit margins, however, remain distressingly narrow.

Steel mill activity has continued its almost steady shrinkage from the spring peak reached in late March. The weekly estimates show considerable disagreement as the extent of the shrinkage during the past week, but Iron Age reckons output at 44 per cent of capacity, off only one point from the previous week.

Freight car loadings, as reported for the week ended May 16, showed a negligible increase, although a fair gain in normal for that period. The latest report on electric power production made a less favorable comparison with a year ago than the previous week.

Optimism Restrained.

Some of the business prophets who a year ago depicted the autumn prospects in glowing colors now speak with restrained and qualified optimism of the outlook for the coming fall. If they hit wide of the mark a year ago, the natural processes of economic history favor them this time. A year of severe depression has passed, weak spots have been eliminated, and in many places, economic foundations have been strengthened. Prices of many commodities have fallen to levels where excessive production is being automatically halted. What voluntary co-operation has failed to accomplish, the laws of economics appear to be forcing.

Although it is now apparent the depression had by no means run its course by last autumn, and that a year ago's predictions of pronounced autumn improvement in trade were premature, it is also apparent that fortuitous developments intervened to rob the autumn seasonal impulse of its full strength. The devastating drouth over much of the country a year ago was a paralyzing influence.

Current crop prospects are generally favorable, and many observers feel that a season of reasonably and uniformly good crops will do considerable toward restoring normal conditions. The fact that acreage has not been restricted as much as had been hoped, may prevent any marked improvement in prices, but a crop that must be marketed cheaply is presumably better than bearing the expense of planting, then having the crop totally destroyed by extremes of weather, so far as the individual farmer is concerned.

Wall Street Briefs.

NEW YORK, May 31.—New state and municipal financing scheduled for this week totals $51,171,316, compared with $24,522,913 last week and a weekly average of $39,382,405 for the year to date, the bond buyer reports. Los Angeles county, California, school districts will consider bids Monday for a block of $2,000,000 bonds and the state of Wyoming will receive bids Tuesday for $2,300,000 in bonds. The city of Albany, N. Y., has called for bids on Wednesday for $2,330,000 water and local improvement and equipment bonds.

Employment in the silk industry declined 2.5 per cent in April from the previous month and 10.6 per cent from the April, 1930 figure, the Silk Association of America reports. Broad loom employment declined seven-tenths of 1 per cent in April from March, and narrow loom employment 3.7 per cent. The decline in spinning spindle employment was 4.1 per cent.

Offering of a new issue of $20,000,000 federal intermediate credit banks debenture is announced by Charles R. Dunn, fiscal agent. Issued for refunding purposes the debentures dated June 15, 1931 mature in three, six, eleven and twelve months.

PRESBYTERIAN GROUP TO SETTLE SMITH CASE

Commission Will Rule on Other Problems in Next Three Days.

MONTREAT, N. C., May 31.—(AP) After a day given over to devotional exercises, commissioners to the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States, made ready to plunge into work tomorrow expected to keep them in session at least three more days.

One of the most vexing problems, that of the controversy over action of the presbytery of Arkansas in sustaining its commission after Rev. Hay Watson Smith, D. D., of Little Rock, had been cleared of charges of heresy, was in the hands of an assembly commission for final action.

The commission is to sit as a supreme court and decide on the advisability of remanding the case back to the Arkansas synod for a new trial or dropping it altogether.

Another problem is to decide on requests for withdrawal from the Federal Council of Churches of America, because of its advocates of birth control.

There is before a committee the question of union with Presbyterian and Reformed Presbyterian groups in the United States other than the Associate Reformed church. The southern church already has given approval to organic union with the Associate Reformed body.

Among other questions to come before the assembly this week is that of the abolition of the country church department, as recommended by an ad interim committee.

PRESBYTERIANS TO DEBATE STAND ON BIRTH CONTROL

PITTSBURGH, May 31.—(AP)—Plans to prevent discussion of birth control thwarted, the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, tomorrow will debate the stand it will take on the matter. The assembly also will discuss the question of further participation in the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

At the same time, the election of a new stated clerk, chief executive officer of the church, is expected to determine whether opposition still remains to existing officialdom of the church on the part of some midwestern and southern groups. The post now is held by Dr. Lewis Seymour Mudge, Philadelphia, who on Thursday was chosen moderator.

Sunday Tennis' Fate Rests With Council

Whether tennis, that once highly decorous and even rather "sissy" pastime, is to join such rowdy company as the movies and baseball in the limbo of activities prohibited on the Sabbath day, may be settled once and for all when the borough council of East Point meets at 8 o'clock tonight.

The eyes of the world will be upon those good burghers as they file, soberly and with a profound sense of their responsibility, into the council chamber. Will they re-open the municipal courts for Sunday players? Or will they let the tennis-prohibition act, passed two Sundays ago on complaints that small boys were creating disturbances upon the courts, stand?

Dr. R. B. Callahan, chairman of the parks committee, is inclined to hedge a little. "We have a little compromise proposition for the boys," he said Sunday night, "which we think will meet with their approval." Was the parks committee going to suggest that the boys play croquet? Or perhaps mumble-the-peg? Dr. Callahan refused to commit himself. Whatever the suggestion was, he said, he wanted it to be a surprise.

SCHOOLBOY RE-ENACTS KILLING OF OFFICER

Verner Corry led officials into the swimming pool room of John Marshall High school and told of the shooting:

"While the policeman was about 15 feet away," he recited, "I picked up the gun from my clothes on the bench here, and said, 'Stick 'em up!'

"He came up closer, then he stepped behind a pole and I saw him move his hand toward his own gun.

"I walked toward the pillar and fired two shots. He fired once and hit the second finger of my right hand. Then we all picked up our clothes and ran."

Verner's brother, Earl, 11, and Schuyler Pearson, 13, nodded affirmatively. They were with him when he broke into the building to go swimming. The officer was killed when he surprised the youthful intruders.

All of them face death in the electric chair. They have been told this, officers said, but they still remain unemotional.

SELFISH PLEASURES SCORED BY SAMPEY

Atlanta U., Morehouse and Spelman Graduates Hear Head of Seminary.

The graduating classes of Atlanta University, Morehouse College and Spelman College, at their joint baccalaureate service Sunday afternoon in Sisters chapel, Spelman campus, heard President John Richard Sampey, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, extol the spirit of sacrificial service, and decry the present tendency toward a life of selfish pleasure. In a sermon, based on the teaching of Jesus that he who loses his life shall gain it, Dr. Sampey cited the sacrifices of Nathan Hale, the American patriot, who died regretting that he had but one life to lose for his country, and David Livingstone, the missionary, who gave his life to the redemption of Africa.

Preceding the services the graduating classes of the three institutions, together with the faculties and speakers, attired in formal academic costume, marched to the chapel from Rockefeller hall.

Rev. Luther Rice Christie, pastor of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church, read the Scriptures; Rev. William John Faulkner, pastor of the First Congregational church, made the prayer, and Rev. James M. Nabrit, president General Missionary Baptist Convention of Georgia, pronounced the benediction. The Morehouse-Spelman chorus sang "Blessings and Glory" and "Lord, We Pray in Mercy Lead Us."

Today Is Class Day.

Morehouse and Spelman colleges will celebrate class day today on their own campuses. The Morehouse program will begin at 10 o'clock in Sale hall with the reading of the class history by William E. Gardner, of Arcadia, Fla.; delivery of the class oration by Houser A. Miller, of Fort Valley, Ga., and recitation of the class poem by Theodore M. Alexander, of Montgomery, Ala. A one-act play, "Hunger," will conclude the indoor exercises. Immediately afterward the annual tree oration will be given by George W. Crockett, of Jacksonville, Florida.

Spelman's class day ceremonies will be held on the steps of Rockefeller hall at 3 o'clock. The program includes: Class poem, Frances E. Callier, of Columbus, Ga.; class history, Mary E. DuBose, of Mobile, Ala.; class will, Mabel C. Dockett, of Valdosta, Ga.; farewell ceremonies, Willie Dobbs, of Atlanta: Ivy oration, Jewell Woodward, of Houston Texas, and alumnae procession with Spelman granddaugthers as escorts. A campus sing at 6:30 o'clock will conclude the day's festivities.

Banquet for Dr. Hope.

In recognition of his service to the city and the nation and especially to the cause of negro education, a group of Atlanta citizens will give a testimonial banquet in honor of Dr. John Hope in Morgan hall, Spelman campus, at 8 o'clock tonight. The banquet will take place on the day before he terminates his twenty-third year as a member of the college faculty.

The banquet has been arranged by a committee of local citizens, of which John W. Dobbs is chairman, Cora B. Finley is secretary, and L. B. Milton is treasurer.

Since his graduation from Brown University in 1894, Dr. Hope has devoted himself to the teaching of colored youth, first at Roger Williams University, Nashville, Tenn., and since that time at Morehouse College. He has been president of Morehouse since 1906.

HAPEVILLE POLICE HOLD CHICAGOANS

Preliminary hearing on technical charges of speeding is to be held in Hapeville police court tonight of two men who were arrested last Thursday night, and whose car contained two rifles, an automatic shotgun and a pistol. The men have stubbornly refused to give their names, police said Sunday, and have given addresses only as Chicago.

Efforts late Saturday night to make bond of $600 apparently had been unavailing as the two men were still being held Sunday night. Officers said a scrutiny of the car in which they were riding revealed no liquor but that apparently it had been constructed so as to hold concealed bulk.

FLORIDA HOUSE BREACH STILL IS UNSETTLED

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 31.—(AP)—Governor Carlton and leaders of warring factions in the Florida house of representatives tonight had failed to reach a compromise agreement to end a filibuster which has ensnarled the house for three days. A fist fight on the floor and a walkout by 31 members of a minority bloc who said they were locked out of the house chamber by the majority, featured the affair. Leaders of a minority faction announced they would seek to resume the filibuster tomorrow to prevent voting on a plan to distribute half of the state's gasoline tax funds equally among counties in repayment for state road construction.

TORNADO DAMAGES VIRGINIA AIRPORT

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., May 31.—(AP)—The hangar and machine shops of the Dixie Flying Service, Inc., at Wood airport, were destroyed and four airplanes damaged by a tornado which struck a narrow area northwest of Charlottesville yesterday afternoon. Officials estimated damage at $8,000.

Missing Negro.

Willie H. Hill, widow of Mose Hill, negro veteran, is being sought by the Atlanta chapter, American Red Cross, at the request of Washington veterans' bureau. Her former address was given as 208 Vine street. Information may be communicated directly to the Red Cross office at 289 Peachtree street, or by telephone, Walnut 3201.

Tenth Street School To Present Big Pageant at Final Exercises

The closing exercises of "Ole Tenth," the Tenth Street school, will be marked by an unique cotton pageant, historical in scope and timely in that it coincides with the Cotton Week now being held all over the south. An elaborate program has been prepared, all of the graduating children taking part, either in the pageant itself or in the songs or the class march. The exercises will be at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The music all through the pageant will be furnished by Mrs. W. L. Wood and her son, Charles McDaniel Wood, who, at 11 years of age, has already commanded rather wide attention to his xlyophone, drums and banjo. They will open the program, followed by a prayer, a salute to the flag and an explanation of the use of the cotton pageant idea in the graduation exercises. Rogers Toy will be the announcer.

The prolog will be in five parts—Before Cotton Comes to Georgia; Dance of the Woodland Nymphs; Indians Enter Their Sanctuary; Pantomime and Spaniards Appear in Search of Gold. The first episode will be: Oglethorpe Arrives With Colonists; Treaty of Peace With Tomochichi; Scotch Colonists' Dance, Highland Fling, and Sailors from Chelsea, England, With Cotton Seed. Second episode: Era of Hand-Spinning; Colonial Dames in Minuet; Eli Whitney Appears; Cotton Pickers Singing, and Dixie Beauties Singing. Third episode: Machine Age; Mill Workers; Dance—Rayon Rainbow. Interlude: Cotton Crowned by Manufacturers; King Cotton's Appreciation; Spirit of Cotton Dances; Cotton Boll Dance.

Following the presentation of the pageant, the entire school body will join in singing "Georgia Land," and then will form for the class march, to the music of Sousa's "King Cotton March." Another song will be followed by the awards, and then the certificates will be delivered. Three memorial medals in memory of the alumni of the Tenth Street school will be presented to close the exercises.

The graduates:

ATTEMPT TO POISON WILSON REVEALED

NEW YORK, May 31.—(AP)—The story of an alleged plot to poison Woodrow Wilson while the late president attended the Paris peace conference after the armistice is contained in the book, "America's Black Chamber," by Major Herbert O. Yardley, in charge of the American cryptographic bureau during the World War.

The author declared a decoded message which fell into his hands while serving with the peace commission in Paris disclosed the plot. The book is to be published tomorrow by Bobbs-Merrill Company.

"The reader may well appreciate the shock," Major Yardley writes, "I received as I deciphered a telegram which reported an entente plot to assassinate President Wilson either by administering a slow poison or by giving him the influenza in ice. Our informant in whom we had the greatest confidence begged the authorities to inform the president.

"I have no way of knowing whether this plot had any truth in fact, and, if it had whether it succeeded. But there are these undeniable facts: President Wilson's first sign of illness occurred while he was in Paris and he was soon to die a lingering death."

Tennessee Senator Hurt in Auto Wreck

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 31.—(AP)—Senator K. D. McKellar, of Tennessee, suffered cuts and bruises and possibly a rib fracture and A. H. Lawo, a Memphis business man, painful bruises and cuts when their automobile ran off a highway near Covington, Tenn., late today and overturned.

Ten Persons Injured In New York Subway

NEW YORK, May 31.—(AP)—A crowded subway train returning from Coney Island was thrown into panic today when a short circuit caused a series of vivid flashes and brought the train to an abrupt halt. Ten persons were injured in the rush of exits.

The short circuit occurred when the train struck a five-gallon tin can, jamming it against the third rail.

The train came to a sudden stop. Fearing fire the occupants of the crowded car rushed for the doors.

A number of persons suffering from cuts and bruises were treated at a station which was turned into an emergency hospital. Ten were taken to hospitals.

FREEMANS PURCHASE LATHAM & ATKINSON

Officials of Myron E. Freeman & Bro., well known Atlanta jewelry and silverware concern which has acquired the entire business of Latham & Atkinson, another prominent firm in the same line of business, stated Sunday they would continue to operate the Latham & Atkinson store at 187 Peachtree street, with a member of their firm in charge, until arrangements can be made for the consolidation of the stocks of goods of both houses. Because both of these establishments are among the largest and most prominent in this section, news of the deal was received with much interest in local business circles.

No new interest will be represented in the affairs of Myron E. Freeman & Bro. it was announced, as the purchase was made by them from their own resources, and does not affect in any way the ownership, management or policies of the Freeman firm. Officers and sole owners of Myron E. Freeman & Bro. will continue to be Myron E. Freeman, E. B. Freeman and E. B. Freeman Jr.

The firm of Myron E. Freeman & Bro. has enjoyed an unusual growth and expansion since it was organized in 1915, and at present it is considered one of the foremost establishments of its kind.

Myron E. Freeman, president, is the dean of Atlanta jewelers, having been engaged in this business for over 40 years. Other officers are E. B. Freeman, vice president and treasurer, and E. B. Freeman Jr., vice president and secretary.

Latham & Atkinson, whose business has been acquired by Myron E. Freeman & Bro, has a long and interesting history. Originally founded in 1877 by the late J. P. Stevens, the business was later sold to Myron E. Freeman and V. R. Davis, who changed the named to Davis & Freeman and as such became one of the best known firms in the south. Some years later Mr. Freeman disposed of his interest in the company and retired from it. In later years it has been operated under the name of Latham & Atkinson, with Thomas H. Latham as president.

Radio Leads Officers To Negro Under Bed

Thanks to the new radio equipment at police headquarters, Preston Clark, negro, of 126 Conway place, was in the city jail Sunday night exactly eight minutes after he is alleged to have shot Okee Jones, negro woman, in front of her home at 576 Conway place, S. E. The woman's wound may prove fatal, according to Grady hospital attendants.

The negro was shot at 4:20 o'clock Sunday afternoon and at 4:24 Officers R. L. Burden and A. B. Scoggins picked up the report, broadcast from headquarters, on their radio. The ensuing four minutes were spent in dragging Jones from underneath a bed, where he had taken refuge, and in getting him down to headquarters, where he is booked on a charge of suspicion. The negro had a pistol in his hand when discovered, according to the officers.

Shortly after the arrest of Jones, service on the police radio was interrupted for several hours by a broken transformer. Engineers repaired the damage, however, and the broadcasting station swung into commission again Monday.

DOLLARS FOR CHRISTMAS
SEEMS funny to talk about Christmas in June, doesn't it? But there's good sense in it!
If you'll fill your bins this month with good Campbell coal, you'll save more per ton than in the past fourteen years! The difference will buy a lot of Christmas gifts.
Mine operators want to keep their men employed, so they cut their prices. We'd like to buy trainloads at the price. But we can't store enough for Atlanta's winter use—except in your basements. So we are offering you a big reduction. It is profitable for both of us.
